Miss Alice McMahon, a pretty little school teacher in the second grade of Mason school, caught an obstreperous youngster by the shoulder and shook him, saying he was a "naughty boy," and now Mason school is to be the subject of a special investigation to find out whether or not the regulations against corporal punishment of pupils in the public schools are being violated. Irate fathers and mothers at a meeting of Southwest Improvement club Wednesday declared their children had been abused at Mason school and called President E. Holovtchiner of the Board of Education to the carpet to explain why girls and boys should be whipped. "We do not allow corporal punishment in the schools," said Dr. Holovtchiner. "If your children have been mistreated, then it is easy to obtain redress. Go to Superintendent Graff of the public schools. He is fair and just and will hear your complaint." Henry Rolfe raised his voice in protest. He said some of the pupils of the school were "tough" and a little licking, a rubber tubing or a spanking with a ruler would serve a good purpose. "I don't think Miss McMahon would abuse any child," said a school teacher. "Why she's the sweetest little thing."

"Anyway, she whipped my boy," said a parent. A delegation of parents from Mason school will call on the superintendent of schools and present their case. Superintendent Graff may put the matter before the Board of Education.

IMPLEMENT MEN TESTIFY

One Dealer Says Twine Binder No Improvement Over Wire Machine.

TESTIMONY ON EXPERT HELP Dealers Contradict Each Other on Point of Whether or Not Expert Help Is Needed to Repair Binders.

That the twine binder was no improvement over the old wire binder in use many years ago was the testimony of Edward A. Ayres, an implement dealer of Fairbury, Neb., in the hearing of the defense's testimony in the case of the alleged International Harvester trust. The prosecution was asking what were the improvements made in binders before the organization of the International company. When the witness was slow to mention any the prosecuting attorney asked if the twine binders were not an improvement over the wire binders. "No, sir," shouted Ayres, as he sat up sharply in his seat. "The twine binders are not an improvement." "Then, if you had your way you would go back to the wire binders?" he was asked. "Never as many bundles went to the mouth of the threshing machine since the days of the twine binder as in the days of the wire binder, I tell you," replied the witness. "The wire binder was a success, the only thing was to get the wire." The prosecution was clearly disappointed in the testimony.

Testimony on Experts. Testifying regarding the service the machines give nowadays and facility the farmer enjoys in getting expert help when he needs it, the witness said: "We used to keep one or two experts all the time to set up machines and go out and run them a few days. Nowadays we set up the machines at the shop and send them out, and not one-tenth of the binders do we ever need to look at again. We don't need the experts so much. The farmer gets more for his money in buying binders than he did ten years ago, and I don't believe there has been much rise in the price." He testified that 75 per cent of the binders and mowers sold in his community as well as 75 per cent of the twine sold there are goods manufactured by the International.

William Belcher, implement dealer of York, Neb., testified that farmers are asking for less expert help than they did ten years ago. He admitted, however, that a great deal of improvement had been made in binders prior to 1902, the date of the organization of the International Harvester company.

A. E. Van Bern, implement dealer of Hickman, Neb., gave contrary testimony in regard to expert assistance. "There are more experts in the territory now than ten years ago," he said, "and they seem to be more available to the dealer." He testified that in 1902, the date of the birth of the International, he did about one-fifth his business with the International. Now, he testified, he is doing one-half his business with this company.

H. P. Walte of McCook, Neb., and I. E. Munroe of Hastings were others who testified during the morning.

Row in Court House Over Right to a Pew

Woman's impassioned shrieks and men's angry words resounded in the court house building late Wednesday, causing such a disturbance as has not before been witnessed in the new building. Questions as to the estate of the late Oscar Rubenstein had just been debated in Judge Kennedy's court. One of the principal items in controversy was the right to a pew in the Russian Israelite synagogue. Julius Rubenstein and his brother were opposed in the litigation to Mrs. A. H. Rabinovitz, widow of Oscar Rubenstein.

Mrs. Rabinovitz charges that Julius Rubenstein made a derogatory remark about her. Her husband is said to have resented this as a general fight followed in which Mrs. Julius Rubenstein, who took the part of her husband, was roughly treated.

Mr. and Mrs. Rubenstein were taken into the county attorney's office, where they became more composed. They said they intended to file complaint against their brother-in-law in police court. The dispute whether the synagogue pew was rented or owned by the late Oscar Rubenstein remained unsettled as the officers of the synagogue testified they knew nothing about it.

Two warrants were sworn out yesterday morning in the police court for the arrest of Attorney Harry Zimman and A. H. Rabinovitz. Both charges are assault and battery on Mrs. Julius Rubenstein.

Auto Concerns in New Locations on Automobile Row

Wednesday was moving day on automobile row. Three different concerns loaded their effects onto automobiles and transferred them to their new locations. The Carter Car Nebraska company, J. A. Freeland Automobile company and the United Motors Omaha company are the three firms that moved in one day. The three moves resolve themselves simply into changing the make of car sold in each old location. The Carter Car Nebraska company has moved three times in two years of its existence, each time into larger quarters until now it has one of the largest places in the city at 215 Farnam street, formerly used by the United Motors Omaha company. The latter concern intends devoting its energies more strictly to the wholesale business, and for that purpose has taken the J. A. Freeland location at 11th Farnam street. The Freeland company has very large interests in other lines besides selling the Midland car, so the old Carter car quarters, a three-story building at 11th Farnam street, more nearly fills their needs. The new building in course of erection at Twenty-fifth and Farnam streets for the E. R. Wilson Automobile company is progressing so that before many weeks it will be occupied. Guy L. Smith's new three-story building at Twenty-sixth and Farnam has engaged the efforts of the contractors again since milder weather has come and concrete is again being poured. Work on the Studebaker building at Twenty-fifth avenue and Farnam has just reached to the extent of beginning on the foundation. Another building announcement from a successful automobile firm is looked for in a few days.

EAGLE KNOCKED FROM OMAHA HIGH SCHOOL

During the thunderstorm Wednesday lightning struck the northwest flagstaff on the Omaha High school and knocked down the eagle. A few tiles were thrown from the roof and for a while smoke issued from the building, but the fire department was on the scene in a few minutes and sought in vain to find a blaze. The lightning struck shortly before midnight, when rain was falling heaviest.

HOLOVITCHNER SAYS PUPILS ARE BAD AFTER SCHOOL

"Children are not bad during school hours, but after hours, when the school has been dismissed and the pupils start home," said President E. Holovtchiner of the Board of Education, addressing a meeting of the mothers of Miller park at the new Miller Park school Wednesday afternoon. "This was the first 'open school' meeting held in the Miller Park building. Dr. Holovtchiner was the only speaker. He said, among other things, that children usually are as good as their parents. He urged parents to be better. It is planned now to have several meetings in the schools, the gatherings to be of a non-religious, non-political nature. Mothers of the children of Miller Park school have been meeting in the building after school hours for some time to discuss conditions and plan means of aiding the teaching corps. We Actually Manufacture Our Own Weather at Our Bakery!

The weather has always been a hard master to the baker. On clear days when the air is fresh the dough raises fine. But on a damp, heavy day the dough refuses to act just right and the bread is not up to quality. With the aid of the wonderful apparatus shown above, we have absolute control over weather conditions in all parts of our wonderful bakery. No matter whether the sun is shining or the rain is pouring down, no matter whether the sultry breezes of summer or the icy blasts of winter constitute the weather out of doors, inside the dough-room at THE BURNS BAKERY the air will always be just the right temperature—Pure, Sweet and Wholesome.

The Outdoor Air Is Washed

The air is taken in from the outside and every atom of dust, dirt or impurity is washed out of it by forcing it through a sheet of pure running water. This purified air is automatically tested. If too dry, moisture is added; if too damp, this air is dried; if too warm, it is cooled by refrigeration; if too cool, it is warmed by steam. Day in and day out, the temperature and relative humidity of the air discharged from this "humidifier" varies less than two per cent. Not only does this wonderful device provide fresh, pure, clean air, but it also takes up the carbonic acid gas given off by the dough while it is in the process of fermenting.
