DEALERS ARE KEPT IN DEBT

Witness Testifies Implement Men Are Kept "Loaded Up."

REDEEMS NOTES WHEN SOLD

Manufacturers Place Machinery on Floor Under Consignment and Take Notes for It Until It is Sold.

That it is very difficult in the implement business to keep from getting "loaded up" with machinery, for which one is in debt to the manufacturer, was testified by A. E. Sutherland, an implement dealer of Waverly, Neb., at the hearing of the International Harvester company in federal court yesterday.

"Do you consider yourself one of the dealers that is loaded up?" asked the prosecution.

"Yes, I'm loaded up all right," he replied.

The defense hastened to draw from the witness the testimony that he was indebted to the manufacturer only for the goods on the floor of his shop and that the manufacturer carried his stock on notes only until he sold it.

"Yes, I redeem my notes every first of October," replied the witness.

The defense further urged the witness to explain what he meant by being "overloaded."

"Well," said the witness, "there is so much competition, so many agents coming around to sell machinery that it is difficult not to buy, and for that reason it is hard to keep from getting loaded up."

"This applies to all lines and manufacturers, does it?"

"Yes, sir."

Further inquiry brought out the fact that the witness had a larger stock of the Nebraska Moline Plow company goods or his floor than he had of the International.

Others testifying during the morning were Amos Friedman, farmer of Shickler, Neb.; George Landrum, farmer, Shickler, Neb.; Oliver Fritz, farmer, Beatrice, Neb.; S. F. Nicholas, farmer, Beatrice, Neb., and John Cherny, implement dealer, North Bend, Neb.

Omaha Teacher is Urged to Return to England to Study

Miss Mary Sullivan, head of the department of English of the Omaha high school, has just received a very urgent letter from Prof. and Mrs. G. W. Wallace, who continued research among old English manuscripts has again awakened the interest of the Shakespearean world. While Miss Sullivan was living in the home of Prof. Wallace in London, London papers were filled with sentiments which led one lord on the floor of Parliament to use Dr. Wallace and Nebraska as a club to hold over the heads of the English and force them into line with appropriations to prevent people from "far-off, unheard-of Nebraska turning up priceless Shakespearean treasures which have been under English noses for 200 years."

Again the English papers have taken up the cudgel and within the last few weeks every paper in London has had an article urging greater generosity, so as to save some of the credit which is now accruing to the indefatigable Shakespeareans, for English students of Shakespeare. The famous Guildhall part of which is still used for great banquets to illustrious foreigners, is at present the matter in dispute, Prof. Wallace having recently made request for easier access to the Guildhall documents.

Miss Sullivan's new book, just fresh from the Putnam press, publishes for the first time Shakespeare's connection with the court masque of James I. Should she return, at Dr. Wallace's request, another volume will be forthcoming.

STOCK LOSS TO BE SLIGHT

Chinook Wind Has Taken Place of the Late Blizzard.

ONE LINE IS STILL BLOCKED

Big Drift Near Kilgore Almost Defies the Efforts of the Big Rotary Snow Plows—Baby Born on Train.

Railroad headquarters report Chinook winds and temperatures of from 40 to 50 degrees above zero throughout western Nebraska and these are removing the snow drifts of the recent blizzard more rapidly than the snow plows, which continue to be kept moving.

Men coming in from eastern Wyoming and western Nebraska say that the live stock losses have been greatly over-estimated. John Reynolds, a ranchman from the Belle Fourche country, says that north and west of the Black Hills the losses will not amount to 1 per cent of the herds and flocks. He adds that the only people who lost cattle or sheep were those who had failed to provide them with shelter.

P. H. Fuller, a ranchman near Valentine, says that so far as he could learn at the time of leaving home Sunday, there had been no losses of cattle. All of the stock men in that portion of the state around Valentine, he says, have an abundance of rotary snow plows in plenty of shed room. As soon as the storm struck, the cattle were housed in the sheds and kept there until the storm abated.

Mr. Fuller tells of an incident that occurred at Valentine during the storm, whereby the population of the town was increased. A Northwestern train was stalled there two days and aboard, en route to Lander, was a Mrs. D. H. Wyman. While the blizzard was at its worst, Mrs. Wyman gave birth to a bouncing boy baby, she being attended by two doctors, who happened to be on the train. Citizens of the town, hearing of the incident, brought clothing to the youngster and christened it Valentine in honor of the place of its birth.

Purse for New Baby.

To make the matter more interesting, the men of the town raised a purse of $50, which was presented to the mother of young Valentine.

Mr. Fuller described the storm as the worst that has visited northwestern Nebraska in twenty-five years, though the temperatures did not go so low as upon former occasions.

The Northwestern is still fighting drifts near Kilgore, the first station east of Cody. The drifts are 1,200 feet in length and in many places twelve to eighteen feet deep. The snow and ice is packed in so solid that considerable of it has to be picked out. Rotary snow plows are working at either end, but are making slow progress.

The Black Hills country has been without trains for five days, the longest period since the railroads began to operate into that country. However, mails and passengers are reaching destinations, as trains are running between the blockaded sections of the roads and passengers and mails are transferred by sleds and wagons around the drifts.

A funeral party from Hot Springs, S. D., en route to Chicago, is still at Chadron, having been held there by the blockade since last Thursday. In all instances the Northwestern is caring for its passengers who are snowbound. Wherever trains have been tied up the passengers have been fed at the hotels in the towns and lodged in the sleepers or at the hotels.

The Bonneted line, blocked since last Thursday, was opened Monday night and a train sent through to Winner. Around Winner the storm is said to have been even more severe than in Nebraska, though there was no suffering and no loss of stock, according to reports.

Trains are leaving Omaha on schedule time and are getting in in pretty good shape. The Union Pacific and Burlington have all of their lines open and regular service has been resumed.

BEAR CAT DANCE STOPPED

Prof. Chambers Halts Display at the Interscholastic Hop.

GIVES DANCERS GOOD LECTURE

Says Such Exhibitions Will Not Be Permitted—You Must Stop This Hugging," Says the Professor.

During the tenth number of the interscholastic dance given in honor of St. Patrick at Chambers' dancing academy, Monday evening at Prof. William Chambers, director of the academy, mounted into the gallery, where the orchestra was playing, stopped the music and proceeded to score the dancers unmercifully.

"You'll have to stop this kind of dancing. If you can't dance decently, this dance will stop. You must stop this hugging, and you can't dance the bear and the turkey trot here. It is against the law, and I won't have it. You ought to know better."

The outraged dancing master retired to the first floor and remained throughout the number.

Previous to Mr. Chambers' appearance during the tenth dance, several couples had been demonstrating the bear in all its glories. They had confined their efforts to the far end of the hall during the early part of the evening, but as time progressed they went so far as to move the forbidden dance up in front of the main entrance. During the first five minutes only one couple ventured to indulge in the bear, but as they were not "called" two others joined, and it was at these three couples that the professor aimed his remarks in particular.

And there are bears and near-bears and there were many who came perilously near it. Although they did not go through the distinctive slides of the bear, they locked arms and did the turkey trot. Many of the couples were dancing contrary to the rules of polite society, requiring the hands to be held to one side. It was these that Mr. Chambers accused of hugging.

After the interruption the couples who felt that the remarks were aimed at them in particular, retired temporarily to the balcony, but soon again took the floor.

On Sunday, March 23, Will Be Issued the Next Number of

The SEMI-MONTHLY MAGAZINE SECTION

The following synopsis of the contents will show it to be one of the most interesting numbers published this year:

"THE REACTION"
By MABEL HERBERT URNER
Illustrated by Harry Spafford Potter.

No popular writer is more sure of her audience than Mabel Herbert Uerner, the author of "The Journal of a Neglected Wife" and of "Katharine," "The Midnight Call" and other stories published in The Semi-Monthly Magazine Section. She contributes the leading fiction features of the forthcoming issue—"The Reaction," in which love is dramatized and given a new setting. It is not puppet love, built of mere ink and paper, with which she deals; but that human, corporeal passion that stirs the heart and core of humanity. "The Reaction" is a great short story, written primarily for women, perhaps, but one that every man will find interesting. The spirit of the story is admirably illustrated by Harry Spafford Potter.

"SPRING DRESSMAKING"
Illustrated with Drawings.

Marianne de Lourey contributes a letter from Paris, in which she gives advance hints of the latest fashions for women adopted in the fashion capital of the world. And Grace Norton Rose tells in detail about "Getting Ready for the Spring Dressmaker." She discusses in text and picture the newest wrinkles and fabrics and furnishes a style that no woman can afford to miss.

"GREAT STORE LURES AND LODESTONES"
By ARTHUR IRWIN
Illustrated by G. H. Mitchell.

Did you ever stop to consider how vast an enterprise is the modern department store? Arthur Irwin discloses the inside workings of these great metropolitan emporiums—the way in which armies of shoppers are lured within their doors and presto! Made to spend millions of money. This article throws a new light on a big kind of business and how it is conducted. The illustrations by G. H. Mitchell will pique your curiosity and lead conviction to the narrative.

"MEN'S SPRING AND SUMMER FASHIONS" By BEAU NASH
Illustrated with Drawings.

What will the well-dressed man wear this year? Beau Nash, the greatest authority on the subject in America, tells all about it in the next issue. He also writes of Essentials in Cloth, Color and Cut, and Hints on Hats, Haberdashery and Shoes.

"THE SCHOOLMA'AM FOLLOWS THE FLAG"
By ELBERT HUBBARD

In this editorial, the sage of East Aurora comes to grips with an old problem in a new way. His remarks about the education of the future carry the weight of conviction, and provide parents and teachers with ample food for thought.

"THE PROPOSAL"
By LOUISE WINTER

A diverting leap year story, in which a tangle is unraveled with humor and skill.

COVER DESIGN
By M. M. GRIMBALL

Everyone will fall in love with the little maid who jauntily displays her Easter Hat boxes on the cover. She doesn't seem to mind her huge load—what woman, young or old, ever did when Spring militancy was in question?
