RELIEF STATIONS CROWDED

Victims of Cyclone Found in Need of Food and Clothing.

STOCKS QUICKLY EXHAUSTED

Men and Women Who Suffered in Comfortable Circumstances Now Cold, Hungry and Without Money or Homes.

Almost indescribable are the scenes at the relief stations scattered through the Omaha cyclone zone. Persons who Sunday were housed in their own comfortable homes, with an abundance of food, clothing and filled with the joys of the season applying yesterday at the relief stations for food, clothing of any description and bedding.
 At relief station No. 2, 1914 North Twenty-fourth street, Joseph Kelly, who is in charge, says he has taken care of fifty persons. His stock of food, which last night inventoried at $500, is completely exhausted, and this morning he sent requisitions to relief headquarters for $500 additional. The food being given out to the destitute is plain, but wholesome, consisting of bread, coffee, meat, potatoes, beans and oatmeal.
 Early yesterday morning while Mr. Kelly was busy handling a large crowd of homeless persons, a woman with two children stumbled into the station exhausted. She was clothed in a man's overcoat and nothing but a thin dress underneath. One of her children was wrapped in a shawl and crying. The other, a boy of about 10 years, was helping his mother around. The mother told Mr. Kelly she had eaten nothing since Monday morning, when a friend gave her a sandwich. The members of the little family were given clothes, which they put on in the station and went away happy with their arms piled up with substantial food.

Assisting in the Work.
 Assisting Mr. Kelly in his relief work are six women and one doctor. Three of the women are school teachers, who were relieved from duty by damage to their schools and are helping the sufferers. Mr. Kelly has been badly handicapped by the loss of a telephone. He is sending his assistants out to the various places in his district, securing the names of the sufferers and what they need.

At Station No. 2, Sixteenth and Locust streets, W. L. Kierstead works continually, taking care of the homeless and suffering. He has taken care of over 200 persons in the last two days and has sent out over $1,000 worth of food and coal to sufferers. He is being assisted by two doctors and ten men and women volunteers. He has a list of the people in his district and is sending the assistants to these places in the hope that he may be of some assistance.

Tuesday night a Mrs. Ryan came into Station No. 2 looking for food and clothing. She was moaning and crying, when she suddenly saw a little boy in one corner of the building. "My boy, my boy," she cried, and, running to the little fellow, was about to take him in her arms when she said, "Oh, I thought you were my nephew."

Scenes such as these are common, according to Mr. Kierstead, who says men and women are continually coming, in asking if they have seen anything of such and such a person, but are always turned away to continue their almost fruitless search.

Cottages at the Rod and Gun Club Are Wrecked by Cyclone

Members of the Omaha Rod and Gun club were heavy losers when the cyclone struck the old club grounds on the south shore of Carter lake Sunday evening. Several of the cottages were completely demolished, and most all others were wrecked beyond hope of repair. The old club house was destroyed, about the only thing on the grounds remaining intact being the boat house. Only care takers were living on the grounds and none of them was injured.
 On the new grounds of the club, farther east on the lake shore, little damage was done.
 Parties who watched the course of the cyclone say that it plunged into the lake at a point just west of the old boat landing. At the time its tall was swinging back and forth. When about over the center of the lake, the tall of the balloon-shaped cloud dropped to the water, and an instant later seemed to be carried into the air hundreds of feet. When this settled, the cloud had disappeared, but there was a violent commotion of the water

A PURE CREAM OF TARTAR POWDER

Approved by physicians and by food officials, both State and National. Awarded highest honors by the great World's Expositions, and proved of superior strength and purity by the official tests.

No Alum—No Lime Phosphate

As every effort is made in the advertisements of the cheap baking powders to conceal the fact that they are made from alum, consumers must READ THE INGREDIENT CLAUSE UPON THE LABEL on the can and never buy unless it shows cream of tartar.

(OFFICIAL)

"In view of the overwhelming mass of evidence antagonistic to alum, it is recommended that its use in baking powders be prohibited by law."

We Desire to Thank the Public

For its patience during the time our service was demoralized by the tornado of Sunday night, and beg to announce that service on all lines has now been restored.

Much of the construction of the past few days is necessarily of a temporary character, and, in consequence, there may be some minor delays in service, but it will be the aim of the Company to overcome this as rapidly as possible.
