Fire at Dayton added to the loss caused by the flood. Early estimates which placed the damage in Ohio and Indiana at $50,000,000 were revised tonight to show double that amount.

Railroads Chief Sufferers.
Railroads were chief sufferers from property damage. It was said tonight by engineers and construction bosses preparing repair trains for the flood districts that strips of railroad more than half a mile long had been washed away in several places through Indiana.

Supplies Cannot Be Delivered.
Supplies of every description for 5,000 persons were rushed to Peru from neighboring towns, but the problem of penetrating the flooded district was only less perplexing than that at Dayton.

Thousands in Factory.
At the National Cash Register plant, on high grounds, thousands were taken in, and in outlying residence districts other thousands waited to hear from relatives and friends who had been unable to leave the center of the city.

and physicians feared a possible typhoid epidemic from the use of the flood water.
In both states the train service continued in a demoralized condition, but every effort was made by the authorities to reach the districts most in need of help.

OHIO RIVER AT FLOOD STAGE

Central Union Railroad Station in Cincinnati Abandoned.
CINCINNATI, O., March 27.—The continued rains of the last twenty-four hours completely changed the complexion of the river situation in the city, and today, according to experienced river men, Cincinnati is threatened with one of the worst floods in its history.

With the Muskingum, Scioto and the two Miami pouring their millions of gallons of water into Ohio, and the licking on the Kentucky side doing likewise, the river during the night rose to 37.7 feet at this point and was increasing at the rate of two inches an hour.

Radical observers predict a seventy-foot stage, but more conservative men say that sixty-three feet would not be improbable, and that until the two Miami run out more gradually than at present, an ever greater stage may be required.

The Central Union railroad station was abandoned last night and all trains leaving or entering this city are being detoured. The flood entered several business houses in the lower section of the town during the night and early this morning found the entire "bottoms" a sea of moving vans working up to their capacity.

At Lawrenceburg, twenty-five miles below this city, fearing that backwater from the great Miami would flood the town, the Baltimore & Ohio track, which runs along the river, was dynamited last night to give the water egress to the Ohio river. This has lightened the town's burden for the time being.
