Every Suit a Pearl of the Master Designers' Art; Every Suit the Very Soul of Grace and Fashion. $15 Every Suit a Garment of Individuality strikingly expressed. Every Suit is Just as We Represent It--

OUR great sale of women's high-class tailored suits, at $15, that is now in full swing, has proved to be a mightier element in value-giving than we ever dreamed of. Our New York resident buyer, Mr. J. B. Orkin, has secured the made-up stock of a great Eastern garment firm at a price that seems incredibly low, but the firm needed the ready cash and we could use the suits, hence this unusual transaction. These suits arrived in time to be placed in our great $15 sale and we have added the entire number (1,000) to our present sale at the one price, $15. Every garment was made to sell at $25, $30 and $35, and we could sell them at these figures, but to show our ability to do bigger and better things we offer this exquisite apparel at the flat price of $15.

Water Works Bond Holders Receive $1.05 Per Share

More than $500,000 in bonds of the old water works company held by Omahans will realize $1.05, according to the holding of the court in the water works case in New York, which decides that the bonds be called at $1.05 instead of par, the decision being based on a clause that the bonds were to be retired at $1.05 if called instead of at par which they would get if running to maturity. This means that the bondholders will receive $50 more per $1,000 than it was believed they would receive at first, said Stockton Hedd, formerly treasurer of the water works company. "And probably $50,000 of the outstanding $4,700,000 bonds were held by Omaha people who purchased them ordinarily at 80 cents." Bondholders carried this case to the higher courts of New York and the decision of the lower court holding that the clause was valid and the bondholders should be paid $1.05 on each dollar was affirmed. The bonds were in issues of $1,000 each and the holders will therefore receive $1,050 for each bond.

PRIVATES KICK ON THE GRUB

Howl of Protest Over Food Furnished by Sheriff McShane. BOILED DINNER IS A WONDER One Private Says They Are Unable to Find Any Meat in the Stuff Provided for Them by Sheriff McShane. Privates in the state militia are raising a howl of protest against the food being served them by their commissary officers. This "grub" is cooked by Sheriff McShane's jail force and is then distributed in trucks to the nine companies of the national guard now on duty in the storm zone. A maximum of 75 cents per day for each militiaman is allowed to cover the cost of these rations. "This is what we had to eat today," said a private who did not want his name used for fear of a reprimand. "A 'boiled' dinner which consisted of a kind of hash made of half-cooked potatoes, boiled carrots and soured cabbage. We had bacon for breakfast once and we had chicken for Sunday dinner, but since then we've been unable to find any meat in the stuff they give us." Captain D. L. Lough, in charge of the commissary department, said the men got bacon and eggs or ham and eggs and bread and butter and coffee for breakfast and other meals were proportionate as good. Captain Lough complimented McShane's force at the county jail for the manner in which they had looked after the young guardsmen. Lough himself is earnestly working to give the militiamen good food and has detailed a competent physician to make inspection of all grub served. Paid For by the State. Adjutant General Hall said some of the men were used to such fine food at

Foster Interprets Price of Chink Meal Hugh Sing, proprietor of the Golden Eagle restaurant at Thirteenth and Douglas streets, is fast gaining a reputation for serving the most expensive meals in the city. Within the last week he has served three liberal customers, two of whom paid over $25, or its equivalent, for their repast. Ed Eastman capped the climax by doubling the amount. Sing's regular charge for his dinner is 15 cents, but Eastman and his companions were unable to understand pigeon English, so Sing had Judge Foster interpret the bill, with the above result.

Rev. A. W. Clark Busy in Charity Work on the Coast

Word has been received from A. W. Clark, former head of the Child Saving institute, that while he would like to return and help in the reconstruction work of the institute, it is impossible at this time. Two months ago he visited with Dr. Dana Bartlett, state commissioner of immigration in constructive philanthropy for southern California. The object of this union, under the Bethelham Benevolent board, is the foundation of a center for the direction of charitable and philanthropic activities on the coast. Last week Mr. Clark obtained the sum of $100,000 from a millionaire of Los Angeles to create a children's bureau and to centralize and unify all the activities of this vicinity in behalf of needy children. This bureau will be connected with the
