NEBRASKA LAND FOR ENTRY

Government Will Restore 332,000 Acres for Settlers.

WAS SAVED FOR FORESTRATION

Proposed Allotment Will Be Made in Much the Same Way the Bonesteel Land Was Disposed Of.

From Washington the Burlington has received notice of the restoration of 332,000 acres of Nebraska land to the public domain. This land lies in Grant and McPherson counties and was segregated some ten years ago, being set aside as a portion of the North Platte forest reserve. The land in question lies in a body, several miles wide and extending from a short distance south of Hyannis on the Burlington, south to near the Bridgport branch of the Union Pacific and generally is the best-grazing section in the state. It is somewhat hilly along the streams, but there are numerous high tablelands excellent for agricultural purposes, besides a number of wide and rich valleys. When it was withdrawn from the public domain and became a part of the North Platte forest reserve it was the intention to reforest the entire tract, planting it to pine trees. The experiment was tried, but it proved impracticable and for several years it has been a cattle range and looked upon as a sort of "no man's land." In the area, which is as large as Douglas county, there are a number of never-failing streams, a dozen or more lakes fed by springs, around which there are hay flats rich in extent. Before it was segregated it was looked upon as the richest ranch land in the state. Under the order of the Interior department it is expected that about October 1, the entire tract, which will cover 2,000 persons a home of 100 acres each, will be thrown open to settlement, but under what plan is not known at this time. It is presumed that the allotment of farms will be similar to that adopted by the government in disposing of the Bonesteel and Tripp county lands. Notice will be published of the date of opening, after which settlers will make their selections, the drawings for which will occur later in the fall.

Some of the Nebraska land that is soon to be thrown upon the market is only a short distance from railroads and towns, but the greater portion of it is much farther away, much of it lying fifteen to twenty miles distant. However, generally, the most of it is considered valuable, none being worth less than $5, and much right now, provided title could be secured, would sell from $25 to $50 per acre.

BUELOW INQUEST MONDAY MORNING AT VALLEY, NEB.

An inquest over the body of Herman W. Buelow, 1429 North Sixteenth street, who was found dead east of Valley Friday morning with the veins of both wrists slashed open by a pocket knife, will be held Monday morning at Valley, after which the body will be taken in charge and held until relatives are heard from.

TO BOOST DAIRY FARMING

Northwestern Dairy Commissioner Says Sand Hills Are Ideal.

GREATLY INCREASED WEALTH

Value of the Land Could Be Doubled Many Times by the Installation of Milch Cows in the State.

Dairy Commissioner Allen of the Northwestern Railroad company, who has located hundreds of dairy farmers in northern Wisconsin during the last five years, is in town for a few days, his purpose being to institute and carry on a similar line of work with reference to the country tributary to the company lines in northern and northwestern Nebraska. Commissioner Allen says that the pine barrens and cut-over lands of northern Wisconsin, which a few years ago were considered worthless, have been converted into the best revenue portion of the state. The same, he says, can be done in Nebraska, and land that is now selling for from $5 to $10 per acre can be made worth from $40 to $60, and that every acre can be made to produce a revenue, adding millions of dollars annually to the business of Omaha. "All that is needed," says Commissioner Allen, "is to get the farmers started in the dairy business and the country and nature will do the rest. I have pretty thoroughly examined what is known as the sand hill country along our lines in Nebraska, and am thoroughly satisfied that the entire section is unequalled for dairying. Farmers have got to get the land into alfalfa and then get the cows. It will not pay to go into stock raising on a large scale. This could be done if the country could be turned into immense ranches of thousands of acres each, but farmers cannot afford to purchase and stock such tracts and as a result they must turn their attention to dairy herds, selling their milk and cream instead of fat steers. "In Wisconsin land that was sandy and worthless is now producing three to five tons of alfalfa hay annually, and from experiments that I have seen made I am confident the Nebraska sandy land will do better than this. This being true, it is possible for a farmer in the Nebraska sand hills, if he owns 600 acres of land, to keep from fifteen to twenty-five cows, and off these make a good living."

NEBRASKA GRAIN IS NOW GOING TO CHICAGO

Owing to the Ohio and Mississippi river floods Chicago has come back to its own as a market for Nebraska wheat, and all the grain shipments out of Omaha are being routed to the lakes instead of to the gulf ports. Omaha grain dealers have received notice from all the lines running toward the gulf or having gulf connections that until the floods subside no grain will be received for shipment. As a result 100,000 a day or more cars of grain that heretofore have been moving south are all being sent to Chicago.

Missouri River is Still Rising Here

The stage of the Missouri river at 7 o'clock yesterday morning was 13.7 feet above the zero of the gauge, or a rise of 1.2 feet during the twenty-four hours ending at that time. A rise of but .1 inch was reported at Sioux City. At the bridge a rise of 1.9 feet was reported. Colonel L. A. Welsh, local weather forecaster, believes today's readings will show that improvement is in sight. He believes that the crest is between here and Sioux City, and although the river at this point will continue to rise to almost another foot, he believes that the crest will be reached here by Sunday afternoon.
