faith of California. The resolutions set forth that California was selected by congress, at its own urgent request, to act for the nation as host to all nations who desire to join in celebrating the opening of the Panama canal; that the president of the United States has invited all nations and all peoples to take part "without regard to race, creed, political system or social development," that California accepted this trust and that "any action by the legislature offensive to any foreign country, to their pride as a people or their honor as a nation, must challenge the good faith of the commonwealth."

President Charles C. Moore regrected the necessity, he sain, of coming into direct conflict with the state administration, but the necessity existed and was not of his making.

"The attitude of the legislature," he said, "that is, the administration majority of it, has shown such apparent disregard of the solemn pledges made by California to the people of the United States that the course taken by the directors today was imperative.
