New Books

Fiction.
THE JUDGMENT HOUR. By Gilbert Parker. 400 Pp. Harper & Brothers. The author's knowledge of men and motives, and his understanding of the deeper impulses and emotions, are strongly manifested. Each person of the story has his charm, or interest, or manner, or point of view, of individual expression. The book opens the night of the Jameson raid, but the opening scene is in London, at Covent Garden. Rudyard Kipling, South African millionaire, sits in a box at the opera with Jasmine Grenfell; with them is Ian Stafford, high up in England's diplomatic service, in love with Jasmine, and sure of winning his suit. On the stage a newly found star of song is thrilling the house when her filmy robe catches fire, and Byng leaps from the box, and with Jasmine's cloak smothering the flames, Ian Stafford goes away on a diplomatic mission and in the meantime Jasmine throws him over and marries Byng. When he returns three years later his apparent indifference piques Jasmine, and in guise of helping him with his work she brings him to the point of disregarding his friendship with Byng if she will go with him to some far-off corner of the world. All this time she is playing with Adrian Fellows, her husband's secretary, a handsome beast and the lover of Al'mah, the singer in the opening scene, and betrays to him Boer secrets, which he hastens to sell to Oom Paul, through Byng's Hottentot servant, and a diplomat from the continent is also another admirer. But when the war opens her house of cards falls; the servant reveals her dallings with the secretary to her husband, and he shows the incriminating letter to Stafford, who is disillusioned and grimly resolved to save Byng further knowledge, befriends Jasmine to her husband and to her husband's friends. Fellows is found dead without trace of violence and Byng, Stafford and Jasmine, each wonder if the other two killed him. The scene moves to the Transvaal, and the grim and simple realities of life and death show the development of character that leads to a new sort of happiness for Jasmine and her husband. It is a thrilling and intensely human story.

WAKI. By John Luther Long. 51 Pp. $1.20. Bobbs-Merrill company.

A kindly old German unfolds the tale of the strife-ridden sixties, full of the fire of patriotism and love. A girl—imaginative, daring, courageous—and two brothers, both stalwart, honest men, are the central figures. The tale sympathetically mingles the joys, disappointments, daring and turmoil of the days of anxiety of the war between the states.

COMRADE YETTA. By Albert Edwards. 148 Pp. $1.25. The Macmillan company.

In this novel the author paints the tragic side of life in the East Side. The book opens with a brief account of Yetta's childhood, before her father dies and forces her, at the age of 15, to go to work in a sweat shop. After several years there is a strike, and she is saved from a most deplorable fate by Mabel Train, an officer of the Woman's Trade Union league.

Then begins a new period for Yetta, a period in which she comes to be recognized as the leader of the working girls, a period in which education and the molding of her very great natural ability play important parts. What she does with her new and larger possibilities and how she meets the various crises which come into her life make up the balance of the story which is fraught with no little significance.

THE BISHOP'S PURSE. By Oliver Herford and Cleveland Moffett. 34 Pp. $1.30. D. Appleton & Co.

A clever girl thief fishes a purse containing $25,000 from a bishop. When the thief is discovered she drops the purse into a girl's golf bag, intending to extract it at the first opportunity. A detective, recognizing her, watches her so closely that she dares not attempt to recover it. Her pursuit of the girl with the golf bag and her many bold attempts to regain the money are intensely interesting.

PIPPIN. By Evelyn Van Buren. 216 Pp. $1.30. The Century company.

Pippin—christened by an aspiring mother Victoria Alexandria—is a child of the London streets. Pippin has been the tool of clever pickpockets, and proved cleverer than her teachers; but she is sound at core, and when a lover comes agrees to give up all crookedness for the sake of Dandy and of the frail little brother she mothers. Pippin herself is so matter-of-fact and go-ahead and hopeful about her reform that there is not a touch of pathos in the situation; but there is a rare lot of fun all through, from the first chapter, where Dad Raymond expounds his views of family obligations, to the very end, when Pippin finds her cup overflowing, having played a very large part in making the fortunes and happiness of a charming American actress.

VANISHING POINTS. By Alice Brown. 62 Pp. $1.25. Macmillan company.

The keynote of each one of the stories which make up the volume is some human characteristic that is universal. Love for mankind, ambition, greed, pride, honor, love for the beautiful, parent love—all form the basis of one or more tales. Of course, there are included several bits of old New England, for the picturing of which Miss Brown is justly famous.

THE IMPOSSIBLE BOY. By Nina Wilcox Putnam. 385 Pp. $1.35. Bobbs-Merrill company.

The boy's name is Pedro, and wandering with his tame bear in company with some other interesting types, meets a wonderful golden-haired girl, whom he saves from a tramp. He is on his way to New York to become a painter, and the other gypsies and their bears are loyally accompanying him. He promptly meets the artist, who has just been rejected by the golden-haired girl, and said artist promptly swaps his studio for Pedro's bear. In a few weeks the gypsy boy is single. Here, at this point, the trouble of this joyous roundelay is disturbed by the base rumblings of nothing less than another Venezuelan revolution. "Thickens" is no word for what the plot does. Being a wise and well-regulated novel, it all comes out right, of course. In the end, but in a very surprising and diverting way.

THE WOMAN IN BLACK. By Edmund C. Bentley. 300 Pp. $1.25. The Century company.

Alghow Manderson of sensational fortune and career and a dominating power in the financial world, dies suddenly at his English country home, starting the financial world into a panic. Then comes the report that he has been murdered, and robbery is not the motive. Every theory is blocked by proof that the trail is wrong, yet every trail leads into some curious angle. There is some very clever character drawing to add to the interest of an exceptionally well-plotted tale, which comes after many sensational pages.

JUVENILE.
BEAVER WILD. By Ross A. Mills. 221 Pp. $1.25. Houghton Mifflin company.

This book is the result of beaver studies of many years, and the investigations were made during every season of the year. The author not only has studied the beaver, but has taken notice of trees, birds, flowers, glaciers and bears, and it is quite the most instructive and accurate account of the beaver that has been published. It is equally interesting to the grown-up and the child, and one of the most pleasing features are the illustrations, which are from photographs by the author.

THE JUNIOR TROPHY. By Ralph Henry Harbour. 320 Pp. $1.25. D. Appleton & Co.

A small private school in New York state is the scene of "The Junior Trophy." "Kid" Fairchild, in an endeavor to earn money, becomes an agent for Tinkham's Throat Ease, and gets himself into hot water by "high finance" methods. Hockey and base ball contests enliven the story, and the way "Kid" Fairchild wins the deciding ball game for his team will win the admiration and envy of every boy.

DAVE PORTER AND THE RUNAWAYS. By Edward Stratemeyer. 201 Pp. $1.25. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co.

While Dave is hard at work, bent on graduating with honors, some of the students are accused of a grave crime, and while Dave and one of his chums resolve to stay and face the music, the others flee in terror. It is equally interesting to solve to bring the runaways back, and goes after them, only to be caught in a flood, caused by the breaking of a dam.

A STORY GARDEN FOR LITTLE CHILDREN. By Maud Lindsay. 94 Pp. $1. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard company.

There are twenty stories, in large, clear type, and each with a full-page picture and smaller decorative illustrations. Every detail has been planned to delight the eye and mind of our little people.

SINGH. THE INDIAN BOY. By James Willard Schultz. 155 Pp. $1.10. Houghton Mifflin company.

The author tells in an interesting way the incidents of the early life of a Black-foot Indian boy. Children, whose interest in Indians is, of course, perennial, will find the book of remarkable fascination. Illustrated.

WHEN I WAS A BOY IN GREECE. By George Demetrius. 188 Pp. 50 cents. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard company.

The young teller of this story came but recently from Macedonia. A graphic account is given of the country and its customs, with the home and school life, tasks and pleasures of a real boy in a land strange to us.

THE SILVER ISLAND OF THE CHIPPEWA. By D. Lange. 246 Pp. $1. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard company.

The author tells of the famous Silver Island in Lake Superior, and represents a youth of 19 and his active small brother, as locating after eight months of wild life, during which they wintered on Isle Royal. The success and escape from a murderous half-breed are due to the friendship of a noble Chippewa Indian, and much is told of Indian nature and ways.

THE CHILDREN AT RED HOUSE. By Amanda M. Douglas. 22 Pp. $1. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard company.

Slight bright children, with a kind and loving mother, make up the Red House family, and the change to better circumstances through a new father, and a good one, does not in the least "spoil" them. Fun and frolic in plenty are a part of their wholesome development, and the story does not drag for a moment.

Hints for the Kitchen.

Boiled rice must always be lightly handled. It should not be stirred with a fork or spoon.

To remove scorch marks from fireproof dishes soak them in strong borax water until the ugly marks upon them can be rubbed off with a cloth.

To make oatmeal jelly boil four tablespoonfuls of oatmeal in one pint of water (in a double boiler) for three hours, adding water from time to time, and then strain.

When making baked or boiled custard the milk to be used should be scalded and set aside to cool. Then make a custard in the ordinary way, and it will be perfectly smooth.

Lamp chimneys and other glassware boiled in salt water are considerably toughened. Wicks which have been used a long time and smoke when burning should be soaked several hours in vinegar and allowed to dry thoroughly, when the flame will burn with a renewed brightness.

Ellick Gets Watch in Recognition of Work

"To Mr. Frank I. Ellick, a willing tornado relief worker, with expressions of esteem and admiration. The Board of Directors, Omaha Manufacturers' association, 1912."

This is engraved on the inside of the case of a beautiful gold watch sent to F. I. Ellick by the Manufacturers' association, of which he is vice president. The following telegram, a copy of a record put into the minutes of the organization, was also sent to him:

"The board of directors of the Omaha Manufacturers' association desire to express to its vice president, Mr. Frank I. Ellick, its most grateful appreciation and sincere admiration of the masterful manner in which he performed the duties which he assumed in assisting in the direction of the relief work given to the sufferers of the tornado which visited Omaha March 3, 1912."
