

ROMAN JUSTICE.

James E. Tracey Fined $5 and Costs for Selling the American.

A Gang of Ruffians Organized to Mob Him or Run Him Out of Town If He Don't Stop Selling the Paper.

Special Correspondence to THE AMERICAN BY F. X. DESHAVERES. ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 13.—The case of James E. Tracey, the newsboy arrested for disturbing the peace of John F. Sutton, proprietor of the art picture "Nana" by calling out the name of the paper he was selling, came up in the Four Courts at noon today, before Judge Morris, a Roman Catholic.

When Tracey entered the Four Courts he was accompanied by several friends. Inquiry revealed that they were acting as a voluntary body guard, his life having been threatened and two efforts at mob violence against him having been attempted.

In opening the case, the prosecuting attorney stated that the arrest was made by policeman No. 246, O'Brien, by and with the authority of Chief of Police Harrigan, Sutton merely appearing as complaining witness, the case being entitled The People of St. Louis vs. James E. Tracey.

Policeman O'Brien testified that he plainly heard Tracey shouting out the name of his paper three blocks away, he being at Market and Ninth, while Tracey was standing at Olive and Ninth.

E. H. Loffhager, 1717 Morgan street, testified that he was not interested in the sale of the paper. He said that Tracey's voice was not unusually loud and he judged that it was his natural tone of voice; that Tracey was standing on the curb-stone, and that he heard some man call him names too vile to put in print.

Here Judge Morris broke in and said that he did not see how this kind of testimony helped the case. He fined Tracey $5 and costs. An appeal was taken.

The case will come up October 4th in the Court of Criminal Corrections, in the Four Courts building, before Judge Clayburn, a Protestant.

The above case furnishes a good idea of the sort of justice administered by a Roman Catholic judge, policeman and chief of police in prosecuting and fining a newsboy for the great crime of selling an American newspaper on the streets of an American city.

Sutton did not want to prosecute, and desired to leave court so as not to appear in the case, but was informed by Policeman O'Brien that if he attempted to leave the court an attachment would be issued and he would be fined.

Wednesday night when Tracey went to get his supper at Green's restaurant on Third street, near Carr, a gang gathered at the doors, and a fellow walked in and sat at the same table with him. He made threats at Tracey and pointing to the gang outside, said that they would "attend" to him [Tracey]. Not wishing to be "attended" to Tracey stayed in the restaurant till the mob left. Only today he was informed that the man who had threatened him had organized a gang to run him out of town or beat him to death. Tracey simply desires to earn an honest living by selling papers, and does not want to be molested or molested by anyone, and the police should protect him. But in nearly all large cities the police, who are mostly all Roman Catholics, discriminate against boys selling patriotic papers.

A PAGE FROM HISTORY

The Poet Dryden Became a Convert to Rome to Better His Financial Prospects.

One of the things which the modern mind has learned is that orthodoxy of religious belief and pietistic observance do not always accompany a high sense of honor, and an inflexibility of moral purpose.

Sometimes a tinge of fanaticism will almost totally obscure the spiritual life. There are those who are actuated more by the spirit of fastidious fanaticism than by the spirit of assiduous altruism. About the year 1686 John Dryden was on a sudden "converted" to Roman Catholicism, that faith being very popular at the court of James II., a bigoted Romanist who had become king, upon the death of his brother, Charles II., in 1685. The suave John Dryden was for the rest of his life an obsequious time-server. He was 54 years of age upon the accession of James II. He was the son of Erasmus Druide, a strict Puritan of gentle birth. He succeeded Davenant as poet-laureate in 1668. He bailed with light Restoration in 1660, which marked the beginning of the twenty-five years' reign of that worldly, Charles II.

Of Dryden we read in Macaulay's "History of England," vol. ii, chap. vii: "With the name of [Joseph] Haines was joined, in many libels, the name of a more illustrious renegade, John Dryden. Dryden was now approaching the decline of life. After many successes and many failures, he had at length attained, by general consent, the first place among living English poets. His claims on the gratitude of James II. were superior to those of any man of letters in the kingdom. But James cared little for verses and much for money. From the day of his accession he set himself to make small economical reforms, such as bring on a government the reproach of meanness without producing any perceptible relief to the finances. One of the victims of this injudicious parsimony was Dryden. A pension of a hundred a year, which had been given to him by Charles II., and had expired with Charles, was not renewed. The demise of the crown made it necessary that the poet-laureate should have a new patent; and orders were given that, in this patent, the annual butt of sack, originally granted to [Ben] Jonson, and continued to Jonson's successors, should be omitted. This was the only notice which the king, during the first year of his reign, deigned to bestow upon the mighty satirist who, in the very crisis of the great struggle of the Exclusion Bill [a parliamentary measure designed to exclude the Roman Catholic Duke of York, afterward James II., from the list of legal heirs to the British throne] had spread terror through the whig ranks. Dryden was poor and impatient of poverty. He knew little and cared little about religion. If any sentiment was deeply fixed in him, that sentiment was an aversion to priests of all persuasions—Levites, Augurs, Muftis, Roman Catholic divines, Presbyterian divines, divines of the Church of England. He was not naturally a man of high spirit; and his pursuits had been by no means such as were likely to give elevation or delicacy to his mind. He had during many years earned his daily bread by pandering to the vicious taste of the pit, and by grossly flattering rich and noble patrons. Self-respect and a fine sense of the becoming were not to be expected from one who had led a life of mendacity and adulation. Finding that, if he continued to call himself a Protestant his services would be overlooked, he declared himself a papist. The king's parsimony speedily relaxed. Dryden's pension was restored, the arrears were paid up, and he was employed to defend his new religion both in prose and verse.

"There will always be a strong presumption against the sincerity of a conversion by which the convert is directly a gainer. In the case of Dryden there is nothing to countervail this presumption. His theological writings abundantly prove that he had never sought with diligence and anxiety to learn the truth, and that his knowledge both of the church which he quitted and of the church which he entered was of the most superficial kind. Nor was his subsequent conduct that of a man whom a strong sense of duty had constrained to take a step of awful importance. The truth unhappily is that the dramas which he wrote after his pretended conversion are in no respect less impure or profane than those of his youth. Even when he professed to translate, he constantly wandered from his originals, in search of images which, if he had found them in his originals, he ought to have shunned. What was bad became worse in his versions. What was innocent contracted a taint from passing through his mind. He made the grossest satires of Juvenal more gross, interpolated loose descriptions in the tales of Boccaccio, and polluted the sweet and limpid poetry of the Georgics with filth which would have moved the loathing of Virgil."

There are many sycophantic and suave-writers in this country who, in some respects, remind one of Dryden. No class of the habitues of America are more contemptible than those alleged Protestants who praise the ordinances, laws, dogmas and ceremonies of a pagan institution, at the head of which is a foreign made hierarchy. Some Protestant preachers and writers seem to be color-blind. If the seven colors of the rain-bow were blended, the result would be white. But the blending of the seven sacraments of Romanism will not produce the white light of truth or the earnest of patriotism. ADALFERT BEACH.

A Chance to Make Money.

I have had wonderful success selling Fish Washers. I have not made less than $2 any day, and some days $15. Nearly every family buys one. They are cheap, durable, and do the work perfectly. You can wash and dry the dishes for a family in two minutes, without touching your hand to a dish. I believe any lady or gentleman, anywhere, can do as well as I am doing, as I had no experience. Any one can sell what everyone wants to buy, and every family seems to want a Fish Washer. I will send you a circular, and you can write me your experience, but because I think it duty I owe to others in these hard times. MARTHA B.

STARVING IN THE MIDST OF PLENTY.

That's what people with poor digestion are doing every day. They have no appetite, or if they do have an appetite and eat what they require, it does them no good because the stomach does not digest it, and the fermenting mass of food becomes a source of disease, of headaches, sleeplessness, languor, and the thousand and one symptoms resulting from disordered digestion. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets promptly relieve and cure all forms of indigestion. They have done it in thousands of cases, and will do it in yours. The reason is simple. Because they digest the food whether the stomach works or not. That's the whole secret and the only secret about Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, for we tell you plainly just what they contain, because we believe that every man and woman ought to know just what they are putting into their stomachs. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the freshest, purest pepsin free from animal impurities, combined with bismuth and the most valuable vegetable essences and fruit salts, making it not only the surest cure for stomach troubles, but a perfectly safe, reliable preparation. Sold everywhere by druggists at 50 cents per package, or sent direct by mail by Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. 11

STRIKES THE SOURCE.

A Pile Cure That Goes to the Root of the Disease. There are lots of lotions, oils and salves that will, through their soothing influence, relieve temporarily the pain incident to piles. But is that all the sufferer requires? Isn't it a horrible thought to realize that the cure is only temporary and the disease goes on under the surface without a moment's interruption? Wouldn't it be wiser to select a remedy that seeks the source and regulates those deep-seated disorders which induce the disease? Pyramid Pile Cure not only relieves the pain at once, but effects a permanent cure of the worst form of piles. You don't have to go through a tedious course of dieting while using it either. It strikes through those delicate membranes and tissues and sets the blood in healthful circulation, reducing at once the painful inflammation and congested tumors. This remedy is not a hazardous combination of drugs, but is a remedy invented by specialists who have treated piles and blood disorders successfully for years. Manufactured by the Pyramid Drug Co. at Albion, Mich. Almost any first-class druggist has it on sale. Don't treat this disease with every lotion and salve that comes along. Remember the part effected are among the most delicate in the human body. This remedy is absolutely safe and no one need fear to apply it freely on the most inflamed parts. The speed with which it allays the pains is an agreeable surprise to the sufferer.
