COMO, Colo., January 15, 1895.—JOHN C. THOMPSON—Dear Sir: I occasionally get a copy of your paper from a friend who takes it. I received a copy of your issue of the 4th inst., in which you make an appeal to Americans in behalf of the sufferers of the state of Nebraska.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 13.—The Leader, a Democratic daily paper, in its Sunday morning edition prints what purports to be an interview with J. R. Sovereign, general master workman of the Knights of Labor in which the astounding statement is indirectly made that following the sending of Federal troops to Chicago during the strike last summer he (Sovereign), Eugene V. Debs, and other labor leaders actually contemplated an attempt to overthrow the government.

General Master Workman J. R. Sovereign, of the Knights of Labor, admitted yesterday to a reporter of the Leader that there was a scheme sprung during the big A. R. U. strike at Chicago last summer, soon after the Federal troops were sent to the scene by President Cleveland, for all the labor leaders, including Debs and himself (Sovereign), to go to some western state and declare independence from the national government.

Mr. Sovereign was not at home today, so that his side of the story or any statement that he might make concerning it cannot be given.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 14.—J. R. Sovereign was seen today in reference to the statement attributed to him by the Leader of Des Moines yesterday, to the effect that he and E. V. Debs had considered a plot to lead a rebellion against the government at the time of the big railroad strike in Chicago last summer. He denied that he had said that the scheme was considered.

SATOLLI ON SCHOOLS.

Attitude of the Catholic Church Therein Is Defined.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—At a reception given last night at the De La Salle Institute, Archbishop Satolli for the first time publicly defined the attitude of the Catholic church toward the public schools.

At that portion of the speech which treats of the public school question he nudged Archbishop Corrigan playfully, and the latter glanced hastily into the apostolic delegate's face, smiled pleasantly and then relapsed into thoughtful attention.

"The school for the instruction and education of youth in every land is of no less importance than are the tribunals of justice or the provisions for military defense. The end and object of the same—the public peace and welfare. The method of obtaining it alone differs. Education of the young is as important a safeguard of the nation as are courts and armies. It is of great moment, then, that we should understand in what true education must consist.

"Some one has said that education is that training of men which makes them truly free. We accept willingly such a definition. True education makes men truly free. True freedom is the power of choosing and selecting at all times that which is best and most profitable. To possess this power one must know what is best and then tend toward that alone, leaving all that is less good, however enticing; that is, his intellect must be trained to know the best and his will must be trained to choose it. Such training is the true education; such training makes men indeed free.

"Here, then, is to be found the strongest argument against atheism and agnosticism on the one hand, and on the other against that system which would attempt the education of youth without illuminating it with the knowledge of the countless relations which man has with God as his beginning and end. And from this same consideration we can easily form a just and wise critterion for judging and deciding on the programme and method of study best adapted and most advantageous—that which promises most for public and private welfare.

"If the Catholic schools of this country differ from the public schools simply in that besides what is taught in the latter they give the youth a sound moral training and instruct them in the Catholic religion, who will dare to complain of that or call it a defect? Surely the state desires that its youth should not only be instructed in that which it ought to know, but should also be educated in that which it ought to perform, and the state is worthy of all praise in doing all it can to bring about such a result.

"But youth and general mankind have greater and higher needs, which cannot be satisfied without a moral and religious education, which cannot be had without the aid of those institutions which care especially for moral and religious training. In brief, just as instruction separated from moral education turns out in vain and often disastrously, so a moral education without the spirit of religion is a work which makes a man exteriorly moral, but not altogether and thoroughly honest.

"I would conclude these reflections by remarking, first, that for these reasons the instruction and education of the youth are a work of the highest importance; second, that the young should be educated both in mind and heart, according to the constitution of the state, according to the great principles of morality, and according to a true religious spirit; third, that all good men should cooperate in this great work, so that the American people from generation to generation may remain always safe in its political and social institutions, sincerely honest and faithfully religious. One who cannot see or would venture to deny the justice of these considerations would merit no attention from reasonable and well-thinking men.

"I have been most happy to accept this reception, and it has given pleasure to the superiors of the institution to offer it to me, since in my unworthiness I have the honor of representing the holy father as his delegate. In the midst of the cares of his spiritual government, which extends itself to all the nations of the earth, of the safety and profit of the institutions proper to every one of them, he has no dearer object nor greater joy than in promoting in every possible way the education of the young. That is the work which he has most warmly recommended to the bishops, and to participate in that work is the greatest and surest title to his esteem."

ALL THE WORLD BOWS TO ROME.

The Statement Made by a Roman Priest at Cairo, Ill.

The local lodge of Catholic Knights of America had their annual installation exercises a few evenings ago at the conclusion of which the officers and members were addressed by the Rev. J. T. McDermott, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo.

He spoke of the close relationship of this particular organization to the church, and during his remarks said the world stood against the Catholic church in its early inception but "today" the whole world bows to it.

"This is almost a fact so far as this particular part of the world is concerned, for if there ever was a 'Rome-ridden' race upon earth, it is in Cairo. The postmaster and several of his help, the city treasurer, mayor, street supervisor, chief of police and a majority of the policemen and councilmen are Roman Catholics. But wait until your next city election and then see what becomes of them all. They felt the strong hand of the A. P. A. in the late state election and they will feel its grip tighter still next May.

Rev. McDermott also paid a "brilliant" tribute to the American republic, in which he said he would rather pay tribute to the president at Washington than to the pope at Rome, and that he was a true American citizen and as such loved the American people.

Perhaps he loves them for their generosity in contributing so liberally towards the institutions of his church, and should they fail to receive a donation every time they call, "which is very often here," then the love for the true American fades into oblivion and, like I heard one of the members of the church, who had been out selling tickets for a lecture to be delivered by this same gentleman, say to a party of friends, that he had gone to a certain merchant who refused to buy one of him and from that time on he never expected to spend one cent in his house and intended to keep his friends from doing so whenever possible. Pshaw! They love nothing that is American, not even our Holy Bible for instance.

A few days before Christmas two young lady friends, one a Protestant, the other a Catholic, started out to buy a present for another lady friend, and when the Protestant proposed to buy her a Bible the Catholic emphatically refused to do so.

Go on, and may success attend you and THE AMERICAN in all your attempts in this good work.
