

OBSERVATIONS.

A citizen of the United States would not be true to his belief in liberty if he did not find somewhere in his heart a sympathy for the Cuban who is fighting for independence against a nation which is crippled because of her subjection to the Vatican.

If the Roman Catholic politicians make their former record good when they find they cannot put in a man whom they delight to honor, and McKinley is the man they cannot stop, they would cause the patriotic societies to fight him, if money and influence can do it, so that he would need help from some other source, and that source would be the Roman Catholic gentry, who would feel that their great assistance, to the said McKinley, should be paid for by a few unimportant concessions and positions which the rest of his friends might not care for. Many men can manufacture schemes, but it is the rogue who has no principle who will put them into execution, for which he is called "smart."

Looking from the outside, at this writing, it seems to me Mr. Stevens needs a guardian. He acts almost as if he were of age, because of his disregard for the opinions of others, and like an unwise boy in his judgment. To make and unmake kings is claimed by the pope, but no one else should claim it.

ALEPH.

Lady O'Hagan's Secession.

In connection (says the "Westminster Gazette") with the secession of Lady O'Hagan, her son and daughters from the Roman Catholic church, and their entry into the communion of the Plymouth Brethren, one interesting incident is mentioned. Lady O'Hagan belongs to the Townley family—one of the oldest Catholic families in England. In the chapel at the family residence "the lamp of the sanctuary" was lighted, according to tradition, at the introduction of Christianity into England and it has been kept burning ever since up till recently. On Lady O'Hagan's leaving the Catholic church the burning of the lamp became a superstitious observance, and it has been allowed to go out. This, it is said, is the first occasion that any member of the Townley family has left the Catholic church.

Considerable astonishment has (says the "St. James' Gazette") been aroused in Roman Catholic circles by the announcement that Lady O'Hagan, widow of the late lord chancellor of Ireland has cast off her allegiance to the papacy, and adopted the tenets of the Plymouth Brethren, her eldest daughter participating in this change of creed. Her ladyship was co-heiress of the late Colonel Towneley, with her sisters Lady Abingdon and Lady Alexander Gordon-Lennox, and a very large slice of the Lancashire estates, together with Towneley and Bancroft Halls, was settled upon her absolutely when she married in 1871. It is understood that Lady O'Hagan has given instruction for the sale of the whole of the land and for the pulling down of the convent supported by the Towneley family for many generations. The residences, however, are to be retained. The present Lord O'Hagan is a minor, and will not come of age until the close of the century. Nothing is known as to his religious views.
