

BICYCLE GIRL ALL RIGHT.

Knows a Heap More About Things Than She Who Doesn't Ride.

The girl who thinks that the greatest joy in life is a gallop over the broad roads of the park in the early morning when the trees are trickling with diamond dewdrops, the doxy birds twittering over their coffee and rolls, and the squirrels rollicking about on the dew-drenched emerald sward, has absolutely no sympathy with the maiden who is content to ride along the boulevard astride a wheel, her nether limbs incased in bloomers and leggings, her chin decidedly "set" and her eagle eye fixed on some object before her, with a determination to win or die.

All the same the bicycle maid is happy. She knows she is only one of many, and that her steed is cheap and cheerful, rather than costly, and easily tamed; that she does not have blacksmith's bills and other proofs of aristocratic indebtedness, and that she has to do all the work if she is to get the exercise; but nevertheless she is happy. The bicycle girl knows a great deal more about the country than does the ordinary city girl who does not ride. She knows how green the grass is, and how pretty the sky looks as seen through a veil of interlacing leaves and branches. She becomes acquainted with the feathery little people who live in cozy nests and who have very well trained voices, although they don't seem to think it necessary to ruin an impressario in order to let the world hear them. She knows that the green velvet award is brocaded with white star flowers in day, and that after that come the pink hawthorn and the fragrant trailing arbutus and the hooded violets. She can tell you if it is going to be a fine day by merely looking at the clouds in the west, and she can guide you home in the evening by looking at the stars.

She learns a good deal besides the proper sort of garters to wear, and the right make of wheel to ride; but, then, some girls prefer horses.

Celtic "Titanism."

In his book on "The Study of Celtic Literature," Arnold showed that one of the qualities which the English people admire most in some of their poets is the very quality which, above all others, is the distinguishing characteristic of the Celtic bards, and that Ossian in particular is saturated and pervaded with the quaintness of this trait. To denote this characteristic trait of Celtic poetry Arnold used the word Titanism. No one has defined Titanism, but it has been caricatured in the saying, "The Celtic mind seems always sailing nowhere under full sail."

Those who wished to know the full meaning of the word were recommended to discover it by devout study of Byron and Keats. "And where did they get it?" asks Arnold. "The Celts," he answers, "are the prime authors of this vein of piercing regret and passion, of this Titanism in poetry. A famous book, Macpherson's 'Ossian,' carried in the last century this vein like a flood of lava through Europe. * * * Make the part of what is forged, modern, tawdry, spurious, in the book as large as you like, there will still be left a residue of the very soul of the Celtic genius in it, and which has the proud distinction of having brought this soul of the Celtic genius into contact with the genius of the nations of modern Europe by it. Woody Morven, and echoing Lora, and Selma, with its silent halls, we all owe them a debt of gratitude, and, when we are unjust enough to forget it, may the Muse forget us."—Macmillan's Magazine.

Why the Seat Was Vacant.

In a crowded Broadway theater as the overture was closing every seat in the orchestra circle was taken except one. That one was "H5," third from the aisle. A young man in immaculate evening dress and his companion, a young woman faultlessly arrayed, had the first two seats. The vacant seat was next.

"Charlie took luncheon at the club to-day," said a young man who sat in the front row of the balcony to a friend in the next seat. "He is in a terrible way and drank entirely too much. He confided to me that his fiancée had declared their engagement off last night. By Jove! There he goes now down the center aisle."

The young man referred to as "Charlie" walked down the center aisle with an air that showed he was killing time rather than seeking pleasure. The usher stood at row "H" and then pointed to the vacant seat. "Charlie" started to enter. The young lady rose to allow him to pass. Their eyes met, and quickly turning he walked from the theater. The seat remained vacant during the performance.—New York Herald.

A Young Girl and a Little Bear.

A few days ago Miss Grace Duckett had quite an adventure. While returning in the evening from one of her neighbor's Miss Grace met a bear. Instead of screaming and running, she, with the help of her dog, forced him up a tree, where she left him till she could go to one of the neighbor's for help. A. D. McDougall went with her to the place where the bear was treed. Miss Duckett herself cut the tree down and when it fell they succeeded in capturing the bear alive. It proved to be a fine cub, and is very lively.—Colville (Wash.) Index.

What KOLA is and What It Does

KONGO KOLA KURE is both a wonder and a wonder worker. As a tonic for mind and body, brain, nerves and muscles, it is the latest and highest triumph of medical and chemical science. It is the GREATEST TONIC the world has ever known. It is endorsed and prescribed by the most eminent physicians, and the medical journals are filled with the reports of the marvelous results of its use.

It is prepared from the African Kola Nut, which the natives prize more than gold, and in some regions worship as a god on account of the strength and courage it gives them. They have used it for ages, but it has only recently been introduced in civilized lands.

It is a POWERFUL STIMULANT WITH NO REACTIONARY EFFECTS. It is an energizing nerve food. It acts swiftly and surely on heart, stomach, liver and kidneys. It gives strength for the highest mental and physical exertion and prevents any sense of fatigue afterwards.

It gives restful and refreshing sleep at night; bright and fruitful activity throughout the day.

To teachers, editors, clergymen, lawyers and other brain workers, under any unusual pressure of labor, it is a heaven-sent boon.

It is a valuable remedy for Nerve Weakness and Exhaustion, Neuralgia, Heart Failure and Irregularity, "Tobacco Heart," Kidney and Bladder Ailment, Liver Trouble, Biliousness, Malaria, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Asthma, Bronchitis, Constipation, Rheumatism, and it completely removes the depressing and distressing effects of the Grippe.

For the tired, overworked women whose nerves are unstrung by the thousand annoying worries of the household this wonderful tonic will prove a priceless boon.

It is carefully compounded with Celery, the great nerve, and is a true nerve nourisher and blood builder.

It is especially adapted to run-down nervous systems. It feeds the nerves, enriches the blood, beautifies the skin, regulates the bowels, increases the appetite and drives out disease by toning up the entire system.

As a guarantee, we return the money paid by the person who uses Kongo Kola Kure and is not benefited thereby.

Put up in large bottles. Price $1.00 per bottle. For the next 30 days we make a special offer of 85 cents per bottle, or 3 bottles for $2.00 per paid. Three bottles are sufficient to give permanent relief in all ordinary cases, and one bottle gives decided benefit.

KOLA-BAC. This is a stronger preparation of Kolo, in tablet form, for those who wish to quit the use of tobacco.
