

ROME'S GRIP ON N. Y.

Tammany's Victory Assures the Church of Unlimited Patronage.

Lots of Money Invested in the Metropolitan Traction Company's Securities.

It is understood that the Third Avenue Company will pay the Metropolitan Company's rental for the use of the tracks in Amsterdam avenue, depending upon the number of cars that are operated. If the deal goes through as outlined the tracks of the Third Avenue Company along that avenue between the points mentioned will be removed and the separate line will be abandoned.

The Metropolitan and Third Avenue Railroad companies, after two years of sharp encounter, have reached an agreement which amounts to an alliance.

One of the most important features of this agreement is the decision to abolish the four track system in Amsterdam avenue and limit their cars to the two middle tracks.

Another part of the agreement is that the Metropolitan has withdrawn from the fight for the Kingsbridge road. The Third Avenue Company is now free to get consents and obtain all the necessary rights of completing the road, which it originally spent more than a million dollars on, thereby completing its system to the northward and placing it in a position to compete successfully with the elevated roads on the upper west side.

It is understood the Metropolitan agrees to withdraw its opposition to the Third Avenue's efforts to obtain this franchise and to make no further attempt to obtain that route for itself.

In consideration of this withdrawal the Third Avenue company agrees to let the Metropolitan company cross the former's lines at several important points where hitherto the Metropolitan has been blocked. One of these places is 116th street and Third avenue, where the blocking of the Metropolitan's crossing has cut its crosstown road in two and rendered its line east of that point utterly useless. It cut off from transfer accommodations passengers on the Second Avenue Road, preventing them from connecting with the Lexington, Madison, Lenox, Eighth and Columbus avenue lines, and diverting from them considerable crosstown traffic.

Another privilege which the Third Avenue company grants the Metropolitan is the right to lay its electric conduits for the Fourth avenue system along Park row without molestation, from the bridge to the postoffice.

When asked about the "deal" Mr. Vreeland declined either to affirm or deny the truth of the report. As indicating which way the wind is blowing, another officer of the Metropolitan company said, when asked why the company was not trying to get ahead of the Third Avenue road in its "grab" for the Kingsbridge franchise.

"Our company would not accept a franchise for a street railroad from the present board of aldermen as a gift, because we contend that this board of aldermen has no authority to grant such a franchise."

Only two or three weeks ago both companies contended that they would secure the prize at the hands of the present board.

More important than the agreement mentioned is the report that the two companies have come to a full understanding in regard to the division of all the territory on Manhattan Island, whereby each one agrees not to invade the domain of the other. The directors of the two companies frankly admitted that they had reached an understanding on several important points, but they pretended that the so-called alliance was merely "tentative."

I asked Mr. Lauterbach if he knew the resident of Kingsbridge were seeking by petition for public hearings on the operation of the Kingsbridge road by the Third Avenue company.

"No, I did not," replied Mr. Lauterbach. "I don't see, however, that anything can be accomplished in this matter until the question as to what disposal the board of aldermen can make under the Greater New York charter has been decided by Judge Smyth. The road is needed very much in that neighborhood, and we hope to see it in operation before very long."

It is reported that Mr. John D. Crimmins has written a letter to Richard Alexander, a real estate dealer of Kingsbridge, stating that the Metropolitan would have no objection to the operation of the road in question by your company.

"If the Metropolitan road has done this, it is certainly very good of them," replied Mr. Lauterbach. "We don't believe that line has helped us in the past in our efforts to establish this road."

At the Third Avenue company's offices the hope was entertained that the Kingsbridge road question would soon be settled. A power house, perhaps the largest in the city, is nearing completion, work on it having recently been pushed.

The above is another incontrovertible evidence to uphold us in showing up Rome's power for political intrigue in America.

Many having read the above in a cursory manner have admired the tactics of corporations, and without giving the matter any further consideration banished it from their minds.

Our attention became riveted on this article when it appeared in the New York Herald edition of November 6th.

We spent hours over it, planning how to best bring our view of it, before our readers.

At last we have concluded to give the gist of the article as it appeared, and add our comments.

John D. Crimmins, as everybody knows, is the right hand of Archbishop Corrigan, and has also been in Tammany Hall procedures.

It is only knaves, or spineless politicians, who will dispute that Tammany represents the power of ecclesiasticism in New York, as the democratic party represents the same in the nation.

The Metropolitan Traction company enjoys the patronage of the court of Rome, as many thousands of dollars of papal money are invested in its stocks.

Our readers may not be startled at this denouncement. We are not finding any fault with papal money being invested in Metropolitan securities any more than it being invested in real estate on Broadway.

The pope has as good a right to invest here as the British cheese or iron-monger.

And it is quite natural that he should invest in securities manipulated by his own control.

But both corporations stood opposed to each other in unflinching mood. This last election came on, the great chance for a master-stroke appeared on the politico-ecclesiastic horizon.

The republican party had to be corrupted and split in order to make it possible for Tammany to rise from the dust.

A spirit of obstinacy, worthy of a better cause was fomented into the ranks of the republican party and Citizen's Union leaders.

Ed. Lauterbach solemnly declared that rather than nominate and elect a strictly non-partisan mayor of New York, the republican party, pointing the finger towards his own breast, would help to elect an out and out Tammany mayor.

We have learned that through Lauterbach and that thing which polled him, the split between the regular republican party and the "Citizen's Union" became an open breach.

We have learned that in many districts, the republican voters were directed to vote for Van Wyck in order to make Seth Low's success an impossibility.

An we now learn by the above how the price was paid. We can now understand the statement made by the whilom impetuous Ed. Lauterbach.

The Third Avenue railroad is well pleased with its lieutenant, who has managed at one swoop to obtain all that they craved in return for concessions that they were always ready to make, but for which they were refused an equalizing recognition.

Crimmins is pleased, for there will now be peace and no intermeddling in any of the pet grab-schemes which the near future will develop.

Corrigan is more pleased still, for he can afford to smile over the dagger cuts offered by the Civic Link Co., and other such bodies.

He quietly enjoys the position granted to him.

The pope, and those charged with his investments, are well satisfied, for stocks will be booming, interest increasing, the power of the church in politics will be increasing with the increase of the material means at hand.

Indeed the 2d of November was a glorious day for Rome and its politico-ecclesiasticism.

Though Lauterbach, like Disraeli, might lend his body to repose in an orthodox coffin, Rome will have had his use like England had that of the great Beaconsfield.

The lesson for us my dear readers is obvious, we must watch and pray, but remember, not forget to watch.

This temporary success of Rome will work good to us, Rome, when successful, is always slackening the reins of circumspection.

Politico-ecclesiasticism will launch out some of its pet schemes under the security of power and success.

We can hear the rumbling of the volcano, there will be revolution of thought and opinion, that will move men into startling methods of action.

It will be a bitter cold day for bosses; bosses are the tools of Rome; as long as we as Americans allow ourselves to be ruled by bossism, we cannot find fault if men in the far distance looking our patriotism over with cool and critical eye proclaim, that we are a people wedded to spread eagles, in lieu of practical patriotism.—C. P. D. in Primitive Catholic.

A Free "Ad." From the Citizen.

We give the following free advertisement with pleasure—hoping that Citizen readers will have due sympathy with Leo in his trying circumstances. It is really sad that in spite of the many organs now grinding out their music for the papacy in the United States, "de monks" are gathering in so few pennies. It is possible that "A. P. A. bigotry" may be the cause of this:—

ROME, Dec. 5.—It is proposed at the Vatican to cause to be placed in every Catholic church throughout the world a statue of St. Peter, together with an alms box and appropriate inscription, for the collection of Peter's pence, which constitutes the main source of the papal revenues. The Peter's pence have fallen off so much of late that the Pontiff has become seriously alarmed. The United States was formerly among the largest contributors, but its offerings have sadly fallen off in late years. It is believed here that the suggestion above mentioned will be contained in the encyclical which the Holy Father is expected to issue on January 1 next, when he will quietly and without pomp or fuss celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of his consecration as a priest, and of the celebration of his first mass. Leo XIII. was so much struck by the lack of sympathy displayed both at home and abroad on the occasion of his fiftieth anniversary, in 1893, of his consecration as a bishop, as contrasted with the enthusiasm and splendor which characterized the jubilee in 1888, of his ordination as a priest, that he has discontinued all festivities and rejoicings in honor of the forthcoming anniversary.

The frame of mind on the part of the venerable pontiff will explain the semi-official announcement just made by the Pope's physician, Dr. Laponi, to the effect that while the general health of his holiness is good, yet that it is sufficiently frail to render necessary the utmost care and the avoidance of all fatiguing ceremonies and festivities that are not absolutely imperative. The feeling on the part of Leo XIII that he is fast outliving his extraordinary popularity and prestige—a feeling confirmed by the alarming decline in the receipts of Peter's pence—is declared by people at the Vatican who come into frequent contact with him to be exercising a sad-denying influence on the closing years of the reign of the most enlightened and liberal pontiff who has ever occupied the chair of St. Peter.

Killed a Snake.

All doubts that may have existed that the soil composing a man of Ireland exhibited at the Irish fair is not truly Hibernian are at rest. The test admitted to be infallible was tried last night, vindicating Joe Lord, who brought the sod from the Emerald Isle.

A green snake, about two feet long, was placed on the sod of King county, which is near the middle of the map, and in ten minutes, while John Keating, Frank Conroy and other managers of the exhibition watched, the reptile breathed its last.

John Bigana, a King county man, who claims that the sod of his native heath is the bane of every snake getting within smelling distance, engineered the experiment. The snake got one good breath of King county and started for Galway; this county seemed to be filled with poison and the lowest of all creatures crawled all over Ireland in an attempt to escape, growing perceptibly weaker each minute. At the end of ten minutes it climbed over the King county boundary and, with a few parting threats with its forked tongue, stretched out and died. The news of the test spread throughout the building and there was great rejoicing.

"Sure," commented one Hibernian, "a man with the tremens could stand on the 'ould sod' for a bit and be cured, so he could."

Did Not Have Papers.

Sixty Chicago policemen out of a possible 410 have been refused civil service examinations because they were of foreign birth and without naturalization papers.

When this bit of news got noised through political and police circles today it stirred up a prodigious sensation, and it was said by politicians of both parties that the matter was likely to start an investigation into the workings of former administrations that would open the eyes of even the politicians themselves. Under Mayor Harrison's scheme for putting the whole force under civil service rules officers and patrolmen began coming in with their applications. A batch of 350 has already been accepted, but sixty of the men who appeared were unable to satisfy Examiner George Bernick that they were American citizens. None of these sixty, although all foreign born, could produce naturalization papers, and they were consequently refused permission to file applications.

When the matter was referred to Mayor Harrison he whistled incredulously.

"It has always been one of the strictest rules of qualification for the police force that a man should be not only a citizen of this country, but of the city," said the mayor. "I cannot believe that the force has been loaded up with men who were not even voters, and it is my opinion that they have lost their papers. However, if there are any non-voters on the force they will have to get off."

Laid Away.

Funeral services for the late Dr. B. P. Reynolds were held at the Oriental Preceptory in the Masonic Temple, on Sunday, December 12, at 1 p. m., under the auspices of the St. Bernard Commandery No. 35, Knights Templar, in which the deceased was connected for many years.

The beautiful ritual of the order was given a most impressive rendering by Dr. Leonard and other officers of the commandery.

A large crowd of society and personal friends of the late Dr. Reynolds thronged the hall, and floral tributes from Chicago L. O. L., the Knights Templar and the children of the deceased testified to the affection with which the late Dr. Reynolds was regarded.

The following orders were represented at the services: Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Independent Order of Foresters, Knights of Pythias, Knights of Macabees, Knights and Ladies of Honor, American Protective Association, Ancient Order of Druids and Loyal Orange Institution.

At the close of the services all present were afforded an opportunity of viewing for the last time the familiar features of the deceased.

The interment took place at Grace-land cemetery in the family lot, the remains being escorted to the grave by a detachment of the Knights Templar.—Western British American.

Y. M. C. A. Has Priest Lecture.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Dec. 19.—The Irish Standard has much to regret lately. It fears for the personal safety of W. C. Brann, because he has been mobbed by Texans.

It casts its eagle eye over into Canada and notes that a priest lectured to a Y. M. C. A. meeting at Ottawa, Ont., and virtually asks that society to invite a priest to lecture to them in Minneapolis.

It is sadly disgusted with the A. P. A., which opposes the Church of Rome and does not seem to be able to find words strong enough to express its humble opinion.

It is sore because a few of the old know-nothings went into the democratic party when it went to pieces and "was accorded a pardon that should not have been granted to brigands!" It has gone to pieces because Gladstone don't lay Ireland's troubles to Kansas Watchman Says.

The man who joins a Patriotic organization for pecuniary gain—for office—should be given a reminder that such kind of material is not wanted in the great structure that is now being built around our American institutions. The A. P. A. organization has already suffered too much from such kind of patriotism. Before election they are very attentive, always on hand at every meeting. After the election, whether they are successful or not, their august presence is somewhere else. Watch them.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The Franciscans, one of the oldest and most powerful of the canonical orders in the Catholic church, acting on express orders received from the pope, are about to locate near the Catholic University and establish there a great conventual foundation directly under the papal protection. Forty-four acres of ground have been purchased and a magnificent white marble monastery will be erected upon plans now being drawn in Italy. Workmen are already preparing the site. The colony to occupy the monastery will come directly from Italy with the special mission of working among the Italian immigrants. The pope is directly interested in this movement and has made a large donation to the order. The first step in this movement was the recent announcement that his holiness had ordered the amalgamation of the various orders of St. Francis into one body. Now the accredited agents of the pope announces that he intends to found a mother house of the Franciscan order near the Catholic University.

National Baptist Flag Opinion.

Under severe pressure, the pope has been compelled to make an humble apology to Protestantism. This was a severe dose, but the infallible father was compelled to swallow it. The pope's official paper called "Osservatore Romano," in the city of Rome, published a severe article against Martin Luther, copied from a German Catholic paper called "Vaterland," which so incensed the German government that a strong protest was made to the pope, which compelled the pope's paper to make an humble apology for having spoken disrespectfully of Martin Luther.

Priest Becomes Protestant.

Green Bay, Wis., Dec. 13.—There would be no services Sunday in the "Old Catholic" church of this city. Rev. A. A. Miller, the priest of the parish, has resigned from his charge, has renounced the religion of the "Old Catholics" and has accepted the Protestant faith. Rev. Mr. Miller states that he resigned because the congregation was not willing to accept and abide by the "Old Catholic" reforms. These, he specifies, as the introduction of public confession instead of private confession and the abolishing of the order of the Virgin Mary. Other than becoming a Protestant, he does not give any plans for the future.
