

THE AMERICAN WEST.

Washington's Birthday—St. Patrick's Day.

A correspondent in the Argonaut, says: The great west has a work to perform for this country and government the magnitude of which is little appreciated in the east, and is only equalled by her promise of strength and extent of territory for operations. New York, the metropolis of this great country, is not fast becoming, but is a foreign city; the sons and daughters of her oldest and most conservative citizens look to Europe for every inspiration of ambitious thought and action. "Going abroad" is the highest distinction. Foreign fashions, foreign fabrics, are only worthy of adoption. To be in ignorance of the west is in New York a mark of honorable distinction. To affect ignorance where some knowledge has been thrust upon them, is far more commendable than acknowledging acquaintance with anything so plebeian as the rough, ignorant, vulgar west. So much for the better classes and the youth belonging to them.

The writer spent the birthday of Washington in the city of New York. A few flags were flying, the streets were empty, no demonstration whatever—simply a Sunday quiet rested over the city.

Yesterday the patron saint of New York had his birthday. From early till late there was a stir. You felt it in the frosty atmosphere, you saw it among the chamber-maids and waiters in your hotel. The car-drivers were not themselves. Trades-people displayed the various tones of green in show-windows. From every rank and in every file there were the wearers of the green.

Witnessing the procession from a point on Fifth avenue, what did one observe? Foreign faces of the lowest intelligence. Everywhere the green, now and then an American flag; once a portrait of Washington, in a medallion, by the side of a face unknown to the writer. There were foreign uniforms and badges, and chiefly foreign faces gazing at the pageant. In some instances delivery-wagons were stopped, men taking hold of the horses' heads, and there detained until the line of march had passed, with unbroken ranks, up the avenue. Each cross-street was blocked by vehicles awaiting to cross Fifth avenue. Down-town further, the mail service was interrupted. Read this:

The driver of United States mail-wagon No. 40, innocently attempted to cross Third avenue at Ninth street, yesterday morning, in front of a parade of St. Patrick's Day celebrators. The crowd seized his horse, and when he got down to remonstrate and explain that they were interrupting the United States mail service, one ruffian struck him on the head with a heavy cane. With blood flowing from a long gash in his head, the driver called upon Policeman No. 2,994, who stood near by, to arrest his assailant, whom he pointed out. The policeman refused to make the arrest, although several citizens who had witnessed the assault proclaimed it an outrage. The parade marched triumphantly uptown, while the driver went to a drug store to have his wound dressed.—New York Tribune, March 18.

What is the meaning and intention of all this? Each year this parade passes before the public gaze. Each year it takes possession of the streets of New York. Each year its ranks are fuller, its Hibernian orders stronger (I counted many banners), and saw, lastly, No. 15 of the "Ancient Order." There may be more. All this means but one thing—increased strength of the church of Rome. Where is there a counter current strong enough to meet this? It does not exist, except in the west. New Yorkers are settled down into a state of hopeless, submissive inactivity.

The first a Roman Argument. The personal and brutal attack made on Monday night on the publisher of the American by the keeper of one of the most notoriously low and disreputable holes in Toledo and his friends of like standing among decent people, is only what might have been expected from the character and record of the assailants, men whose names are found in criminal calendars and police reports, and whose faces are recognized in "rogues' galleries" here and elsewhere. It was fully in keeping with the methods incited, encouraged and approved by the Romish clergy, who never fail to resort to violence when defeated at the polls. This cowardly attack was due not only to the independence of the publisher of the American in boldly championing in his paper the cause of our public school system as against the narrow and antiquated teachings of the parochial schools, but the victim was selected as the representative of an order which, while not attacking or interfering with the Roman Catholic or any other religious belief, simply opposes priestly aggression against the free schools of our common country and is called "The American Protective Association," because it was organized as a defensive measure and for the purpose of protecting American institutions and notably our public schools from the intrigues and attacks of the Romish priesthood.

The attack was the legitimate outcome and expression of the hatred the Roman Catholic hierarchy entertains for the freedom of American educational interests. Embracing as it does with the fold of its church the vilest and most brutal elements of our community, men who get their living by methods which exclude them from all decent society, it is easy for the priesthood to find among its misguided followers willing tools for any outrage which has priestly sanction and the guarantee of absolution for any sin committed in what they term "the defence of the church.—Toledo American.

POPE PIUS IX. WAS A MASON. But He Was Expelled From the Order by the Grand Lodge.

Masons are mildly interested in the cable reports of the commotion in the French chamber of deputies recently over the statement by President Floquet that Pope Pius IX. was a freemason.

A worn copy of the Voice of Masonry, published in July, 1874, has been found, in which the story of the expulsion of Pius IX. from the order was published. The story is as follows:

"At the semi-annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of Masons, Scottish Rite of the Orient, of Palermo, Italy, on the 27th day of March, last, Pope Pius IX. was expelled from the order. The decree of expulsion was published in the official masonic paper at Cologne, Germany, and is preceded by the minutes of the lodge in which he was initiated, and is as follows:

"A man named Mastai Ferretti, who received the baptism of freemasonry and solemnly pledged his love and fellowship, and who afterward was crowned pope and king, under the title of Pius IX., has now cursed his former brethren and excommunicated all members of the order of freemasons. Therefore, said Mastai Ferretti is herewith, by the decree of the Grand Lodge of the Orient, Palermo, expelled from the order for perjury."

The charges against him were first preferred in his lodge at Palermo, in 1865, and notification and copy thereof sent to him, with a request to attend the lodge for the purpose of answering the same. To this he made no reply, and for divers reasons the charges were not pressed until he urged the bishops of Brazil to act aggressively toward the freemasons. Then they were preferred, and after a regular trial a degree of expulsion was entered and published, the same being signed by Victor Emmanuel, king of Italy and grand master of the orient of Italy."
