He Came Prepared.

You don't know what love is, Mr. Swackhammer," protested the beautiful girl with a smile of incredulity on her face; 'the sentiment you entertain for me is only a passing fancy. When It has had its brief day and you look at it in the cold light of reason you will be surprised that you ever mistook so palpable a delusion for the genuine thing it assumes to represent." "But hear me, Miss Garlinghouse," exclaimed the young man, calmly, yet earnestly, "am I not old chough to know my own."

"It is not a question of age, Mr.

Swackhammer," interposed Miss Garlinghouse, still smiling increduously, "but of scientific demonstration. As you are probably aware, I have devoted myself for the last two or three years to a severe course of scientific study, and I have acquired the habit, perhaps unconsciously, of accepting nothing as true that is not demonstratable by the inexorable rules of mathematics or the soundest process of logical induction. Science has become with me the touchstone of all things asserted, claimed or proposed, and-"

"But how do you apply the rules of science to matters of the heart?" inquired the young man. 'How can you subject my love to the test of a mathematical or scientific demonstra-

"In this way, Mr. Swackhammmer. The action of the passion or emotion of love upon the very sympathetic ganglia of the human organism causes certain well established and clearly defined phenomena. When you speak to me of love I look for the appearance of those phenomena. From a scientific point of view they are not satisfactory. The tremor in your voice is not sufficiently pronounced. Your articulation is not thick and husky. The color in your face is hardly a shade paler than its normal hue, and you have no nervous movements of the hands. Do you think a mere assertion can disprove the evidence-'

"Alvira Garlinghouse," came impetulously from the lips of the young man as he rose to his feet, "there are facts in mental as well as physical science that are not wholly beneath your notice. Some men are gifted with a marvelous faculty of self-control, so far as external manifestations are concerned. Beneath the apparently unmoved exterior that you have subjected to a scientific test, there rages a volcano of passion. Do you doubt it? I will demonstrate it to am thematical certainty. I foresaw the scepticism with which you would receive my avowal and came prepared. Listen to the beating of my beart "

And with a quick movement he drew from beneath his waistcoat the flexible tube of a stethoscope and placed it against her ear.

"Count the pulsations?" he continuwas not use of beat, seventy pulsations. Note the means revelation of deathless love conveyed an abundance, but as they are not very dainty in their taste, the account will be light. For a young farm two barrels a day of hotel table scraps will keep the frogs in splendid shape, so that at the by this respire meter!" And he produced another flexible tube. 'Respirations per minute, twenty-eight! Twenty-eight, Alvira-count themtwenty-eight. Normal respirations per minute, from fourteen to twenty in adults. Observe the mathematical certainty of tempestuous passion demonstrated by my temperature!" And opening his tightly-closed left hand, he showed her a small thermometer. Temperature, Alvira, one hundred and twelve degrees! Normal temperature, about, one hundred degrees Fabrenheit! Have I proved my love?"

"Alpheus," murmured the lovely girl, as she placed her head on his shoulder, with her lips at an accessible angle, "you have!" - Chicago Tri-

Saved by an Impression. In August 1887, I was in Washington. Being ready to depart for home I went to the Pennsylvania railroad office for a ticket, and there learned that two trains left about the same time.

One was an ordinary passenger train-fare $11; the other a faster and a better equipped train as far as Pittsburg-fare $14. As by either train I would arrive home (Cleveland, O.) at the same time, I thought $3 was worth saving, and was about to purchase the $11 ticket, when I was impressed to wait. I then went to the back room and took a seat. I heard no voice, but I was so strongly impressed to take the fast train that I did and paid $14 for the ticket. I left Washington and arrived in Pittsburg on time. I had a good supper, took the night train and arrived home all right next morning. At breakfast I read in the morning papers: "A terrible accident at the Horse Shoe Bead, on the Pennsylvania railroad—a large number injured, several fatally." The train that met with the accident was the slow train I intended to take, but did not because of the impressions I received at the depot. I offer no explanation, but merely state a fact. When reading the account of the accident a shudder approximating a convulsion run over my body from thinking how I had escaped possibly

"I was crossing the Atlantic in a Cunarder," said he, "several years ago, and poker flourished most abundantly in the smoking room. It was rather a big game most of the time, but my buck was good and I staid till the finish. On the third day the stewart of the smoking room, a rather superior sort of an Englishman, asked to be allowed to take a hand. We told him he'd better stay out, but he persisted and we let him in. He might have played poker all right in England with Englishmen, but he didn't know enough to stand up with four or five Yankees and a couple of Illinois legislators, I suppose he lost two months' pay at the first sitting. Most of it he lost to me.

When the game was over and the steward was going off with a long face I called him back. I gave him the money I had won from him and told him to avoid Americans at cards. 'You think, you blarsted Britishers, that you know a powerful lot, but you'll find Yankee and western poker players a darned sight smarter every time.'

He took the money and the advice."—Pittaburg Dispatch.

Stubinstein's Photographic Treasures.

Rubinstein's Photographic Treasures Rubinstein, the pianist, has many photographs, but none that he cherishes more dearly than one of which he is accustomed to relate the following tale. He was, at the very outset of his professional career, about to give his first concert at a town in Russian Po-land. Rubinstein sat at the box office all day, but not a single person came to buy tickets, and the young musician had a sinking feeling at his heart. At last, however, a Polish Jew entered, and threw down a rouble, asking for six seats. This rouble proved the first of many thousands of coins that the artist many thousands of coins that the artist was to pocket during his career. Years afterward Rubinstein again passed through this Polish town, met his friendly Jew of old, and had him photographed. This counterfeit the pianist would not part with now for many roubles.—New York Tribune.

Siberia's New Waterway.

A new waterway in Siberia will con-nect the rivers Obi and Yenissei, and will utilize the river Obi and its branches, Ket, Osernaja, Lomowotaja and Jasswaja—an outlet of the "Great Lake"—on one side, and on the other the Yenissei with its tributaries, the Great and Little Kass. A cutting 41 miles long, between the Great Lake and the Little Kass will complete the consection between the transfer of the consection. nection between the two rivers. The difference of level between the Great Lake and the river Obi is 65; feet, which will necessitate eight locks being built, while between the Great Lake and the enissei there is a fall of nearly 174 feet Yenissei there is a fall of nearly 174 feet which will be got over by twenty-five locks. The Great Lake is 64 feet deep. The cutting, or canal out of it is 42.6 feet wide and 4.1 feet deep. The total amount of excavation is 719,680 cubic yards, of which 78,000 cubic yards have yet to be dug out. The works were commenced in 1883 and will be finished this year, the estimated cost being 8,000,000 rubles.—London Standard.

Any man who has a pond on his farm

Any man who has a pond on his farm can try the experiment of raising his own frogs, says the Boston Journal. First, let him buy six pairs of fine New Jersey breeders, and dump them into the water. With these for a starter, you may select a quantity or domestic batrachia, and then you will have the nucleus of a fortune. Don't interfere with your water investment for a year, any more than to keep your growing stock well supplied with food. They require an abundance, but as they are not very and of twelve months you can begin marketing all that you can fish out at the same price as spring chickens. Give me the time and facilities, and I will wager that at the end of two years I will be living on an income of $5,000, and my frogs will pay all my expenses.

An Old Indian Pupil. The Indian school at Carlisle, Pa., has the oldest pupil of any educational institution in the United States. He is more than 60 years of age. Crazy Head is his name, and he was once chief of the Crow nation. He was a bold warrior and an able ruler. He is anxious to learn the ways of the white men, and is now receiving instructions in black-smithing. During the coming winter smithing. During the coming winter he will attend school. He is a man in vigorous health, and has a more refined face than is often found in his race. He is docile and patient, and there is something almost pathetic about his longing to learn the customs of civilization before he dies. - Boston Transcript.

Mr. Frank Lawrence Dant held onetwentieth of ticket No. 3,894 which drew the first capital prize of $300,000 in The Louisiana State Lottery on the 7th inst.
The $15,000 was collected through the Citizens' National Bank of Louisville.
Mr. Dant is rather prepossessing in personal appearance, nearly six feet high and weighs 150 pounds. He is an intelligent and affable gentleman, only twenty-two years old and unmarried. He was educated at St. Mary's College, and learned book-keeping at the Southern Business College, Louisville. For three years he kept books for his father, Mr.
J. W. Dant, proprietor of a large distillery of an old brand of pure Kentucky whisky at Dant's station, fourteen miles from Lebanon, Marion county, Ky.
One year ago he accepted the position of time-keeper for the Knoxville division of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, and clerk of assistant master of sion of the Louisville and Nashville rall-road, and clerk of assistant master of trains at a salary of $50 per month, and is stationed at the railroad, one mile from Stanford, Ky. His good fortune has not turned his head, for he intends to hold his place, hoping by close appli-cation to business he will be promoted. For two years he persisted in purchas-ing tickets in The Louisiana State Lot-tery. Four months since he organized ing tickets in The Louisiana State Lot-tery. Four months since he organized a club, of which he was chief, and con-tinued to buy tickets. Last month he drew $25, and on the 7th came the big prize. He has paid out what was due the club, and will invest his portion in some safe speculation, and continue to work and court fickle fortune as hereto-fore.

Bolling Well in Georgia.

Professor Lawson E. Brown reports quite a phenomenon on his plantation in Burks county, Ga. He has a well there 100 feet deep, with about forty feet of water in it. About three months ago the water began to bell up with a roar distinctly heard at some distance. The disturbance continued for weeks, then ceased for a short time, and began again with equal vigor. The tenant on the place has recently cleaned out the well to the bottom, discovering no cause to produce the phenomenon.—Chicago Harald.

The Remedy is sold by druggists at only 50 cents. This wonderful remedy has fairly attained a world-wide reputation. If you have dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the masal passages, discharges inling from the head into the throat, cometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; if the eyes are weak, watery and inflamed; if there is ringing in the ears, deafness, backing or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabe from ulcers; the voice being changed and has a nasal twang; the breath offensive; smell and taste impaired; sensation of dixiness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility, you are suffering from nasal catarrh. The more complicated your disease, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms.
