MR. AND MRS. BOWSER .

I suppose Mr. Bowser is just like any other man around the house, and I suppose it is a wife's duty to put up with a husband's inconsistencies. The other day he came rushing in from the barn and asked.

"Have you seen the cork-screw anywhere within a day or two?" "I don't remember."

"Well its funny. I left it in here two or three days ago, and it ought to be here now. It's curious that I can't lay a tool down without somebody eating it up!"

"Perhaps it's in the lavatory." He went rushing sround for five minutes, and then came back to say:

"If there's another bouse in Detroit, run like this I'd like to see it?"

"Wby, what's the matter?" "Matter! Didn't I leave the corkscrew on the stair steps day before yesterday, and haven't you flung it out doors, chooped it up or given it away to some beggar! It's singular how good care you take of your own things and how little you care for mine, I'll never bring another tool home!" "Just sit right still and I'll find it."

"It's gone forever!" 'No, it isn't. I remember now where saw it."

I went out to the drawer of the kitchen table and found it. "What's that?" he asked, as I return-

"The corkscrew.

"Is a corkscrew a screw-driver?" 'But you asked for the corkscrew." "Mrs. Bowser, are you going crazy?

Don't I know whether I want the corkscrew or the screw-driver? "But you said corkscrew."

'Never!" "Well, the scrow-driver is right there on the table within two feet of you."

"Oh! It is! And why could't you have said so in the first place?" One morning he wanted to use the spade, and not finding it in the barn came rushing in to inquire: . How much did that junk dealer pay you for the spade?"

"What do you mean?" "Why, the spade is nowhere to be found and I presume you sold it." "Have you looked in the barn?" "Of course."

"And in the yard?" "Certainly."

And down stairs?"

"Yes. I had that spade yesterday. and now it's gone! There are some very queer happenings around this house, Mrs. Bowser!"

"But you don't expect me to watch the barn tools, do you?"

"All right! I've got my ideas about this matter. You may have got fifteen cents for a spade which cost me $1, but I wouldn't have your conscience for $1,000!"

At that moment a boy came to the back door with a spade and said: "You left it in the alley last night, Mr. Bowser.

"There!" said I, after the boy had

"Yes, there!" echoed Mr. Bowser. "Don't let this thing happen again! I see through it and I give you warning!"

Mr. Bowser has a rusty, old handsaw which has been the cause of several girls leaving the house. If he is tinkering about he is sure to leave it under foot and the next time he wants it there's a great row. He charged one girl with selling it, and she quit just as he found it in the garre. He hinted to another that her beau had taken it away, and she had only gone when the saw was found in the yard. A girl finally came who, when she found the saw on her kitchen table, removed it to the settee in the parlor, and as Mr. Bowser found it there he scratched his head and went about for the next half hour in a deep

Once when he wanted the gimlet he came in and rummaged around and observed:

"Mrs. Bowser if this house needs a dozen screw drivers, why dont you say so and let me order them?" "Why we don't need 'em."

'Ob, yes, we do? There must be distressing need of 'em. When I can't keep one at the barn ten minutes. there must be distressing use for 'em here. I'll order a dozen for you right off."

'Do you mean seew-drivers Mr. Bowser? '

"Am I a bat? Don't I know what I'm talking about?"

He went to the telephone, salled up a hardware store, and ordered a dozen screw-drivers sent up at once. He was waiting for them to arrive when I found the gimlet on a bracket in the library and told him he had best take it to the barn. "When I came in here and asked you for this gimlet why did you deny knowing its whearsbouts?" he sternly demanded.

"You asked for the screw-driver." "Don't I know what I asked for!" "Well, here it s. I wrote it down. Is that 'screw-driver' or 'gimlet?'."

He saw that he was caught, though he wouldn't give up, but I had my revenge when a dozen screw-drivers came up C. O. D. and he had to fork over for them.

And yet I don't want the police to me. ' - Detroit Free Press.

get an idea that Mr. Bowser and I quarrel or that our bome is not a happy one, he is one of the best men, and just like the average busband. He feels it the duty of a husband to know it all, and any coming down to apologizing is beneath his dignity. After a call the other day he remarked on the beauty of Mrs. blank's eyes. "Her eyes are blue, my dear," I replied. "Blue? Is your sight failing as bad as that?

She Was a Daisy.

a Pullman sleeper the other night watched an affecting parting between a young woman and her sweetheart. She was a bouncing maiden of the Daisy Miller type-he an insignificant-tooking young dade with catterpillar colored fuzz on his upper lip and a hat two or three sizes too small for his small head. But what he got the cash in his hands—it came to him by the Adams Express Company, and the freight was $60—he found the man who sold him the half of the winning ticket and gave him $50. Having relieved himself of this gift, the most fortunste darkey of his time proceeded to give his son, a rather happy-go-lucky youth, who does odd jobs about, something like $1,200 or $1,500, merely as a nest egg, as it were, to a future brood of as many thousands. Then the delighted Amos the next day—he had probably not slept a wink in the night, with all the money in the house—hired a hack, though the distance to the savings banks was only two blocks away, and rode, matter? They were

Two souls with but a single thought. The agony of parting almost overcame them. Their sweet sorrow was long drawn out. Their lips clung together in many long kisses, while he whispered siry nothings in her ear and embraced her repeatedly, and she wept and sobbed into her freshly ironed handkerchief. The eyes of every one in the car were upon them and cynical and scofling remarks were plenty. At last they tore themselves apart and he went outside, under the glare of the electric light, which displayed his beauty to the utmost advantage, and called all sorts of tender last instructons to her through the window, while she in the shrill American voice, directed "Cholly" to go and see "Ma" often while she was away.

Marcantonio, the cynic, who had come to see me off, sneered audibly. "Don't scoff at youth and beauty in distress -don't sneer at love's young dream," I said.

"Distress! Love's young dream!" he gibed. 'Mark my words, before you've been out a half an hour she will be flirting with some other man."

The eastern-bound express rolled out of the depot, the passengers settled themselves for the journey and the young Pullman conductor made his first appearance with great brilliancy and solat. How it happened I cannot tell, for my thoughts were busy elsewhere, but after a little I raised my eyes and lo! "Cholly" was forgotten. Daisy's tears were dried and she was conducting, according to the best knowledge and most authentic rules of the game, a successful flirtation with the young conductor. She giggled, she made eyes, she frowned prett ly, she was so charmingly helpless about the window she must have water and oranges, and the dickens knows what. and the radway fledgling was at her beck and call. Next morning the flirtation made percept ble progress. Daisy went to breakfast with gilt buttons and blue clothes, and what there was ins de of them. She donued her ulster and the big flaring Gainsborough and went out and rode upon the platform "to look at the scenery," which consisted mainly of flat meadows freshly plowed, and was accordingly of surpassing beauty. She talked at the top of her lungs, and informed the other passengers that now she guessed she'd better wash her hands, and anon she guessed she'd better have a pillow. This being brought, she made further subjugation of the unhappy conduct or, for, taking it, she posed upon it in such effective attitudes as to win glances of approval and speeches of admiration from the infatuated, hopelessly besotted youth. In fact, for several hundred miles Daisy formed the staple amusement for a car full of trav-

"But she hasn't?" "Not yet. You can take the report, but give her another week to get around in. This is the fourth time she's gone, and she's always come back inside of three weeks." "You must be used to it?"

'Oh, yes. You've got to take the world as you find it. Give her another week, sergeant, and then if you find her advise her to come home. Tell her she can't find many husbands like Pref. A. Loisette—My Dear Sir: You may remember that, after I took your lectures upon the "Improvement and Proper Use of the Memory," personally, at your office, 237 Fifth Ave., I declined to allow you to publish a certificate over my own name, in harmony with a rule formed many years ago; but, having seen the base attempt to rob you, depart from the rule, and send you, unsolicited, the statement that, in my opinion, if your exercises are practiced sufficiently to master the system, it is of great advantage to even a strong memory, and furnishes incalculable aid to a weak one.
