Rain-Maker Melbourne.

The following appeared in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat of Sept. 1, as a special from Cheyenne, Wyo., concerning the experiment of producing rain:

A fairly successful, if not entirely conclusive test of the Frank Melbourne method of producing rain, was had here this afternoon, and has created a profound sensation. The people are filled with amazement, the most violent skeptics capitulate, while Melbourne is self-sustained and concluent as ever. At 8 through trains.

On last Monday County Attorney Conley filed a petition in the county court against C. C. Jameson and his bondsmen for $98, the balance yet due on the shortage reported by the expert after deducting the offsets made by the county commissioners. The amount is not large enough for the case to de commenced in the district court. There is one more case yet to be filed and that is against E. D. Satterlee and his bondsmen, for the balance yet due the county.

—In his last attempt to bring rain at Cheyenne, Melbourne did not accomplish what he undertook, but the reports are that the great majority of the people there have faith in his plan. It may be Capt. Ravenscraft, the observer, had been studying his instruments, and been studying his instruments, and admitted unwillingly that he was completely mystified, and said the shower was certainly in part due to artificial causes. He predicted, and every appearance indicated, that the remainder of the day would be clear.

day would be clear.

At 4;30 the severest shower of the sea son sent every one indoors. There was a driving down-pour for half an hour. It was preceded by sharp lightning and thunder, and was a clear but uneven report. This fall made the total for the day 47-100ths of an inch, nearly the half inch promised by the wizard. The wind was against Melbourne till the rain started. Cheyenne was a storm center for an era extending over 25 miles in every direction, and during the experiment the wind veered clear around, almost describing a circle. Melbourne says there will be much more rain. He has a hole in the roof of his shop, but nothing has been seen to come from the opening. Capt. Ravenscraft and the gentlemen who brought Melbourne here are well satisfied, and if to-day's experiment is the criterion the man must be granted mastery of the elements. Further trials will be made, and the arrangements will be made for state service by
