A Peculiar Commission.

One of our Springfield artists, whose reputation for lifelike portraits is established, had an old lady walk into his studio the other morning with a queer commission. She was a quaint, odd figure, clad in an old style bombazine with a few straggling trimmings of rusty crape, and she evidently was not familiar with city life. "Please sir," she burst out when the artists had kindly asked her to be seated, "I'd like to have ye fix up a life size picture of my Josiah jest as soon's ye can. He died two years ago come thanksgiving, an I've been savin' up for his picture ever since. I guess you can do it; he never had no picture done but this one," drawing out a blurred daguerreotype of a plump faced five-year old boy in petticoat and pantslets. Josiah wuz forty-five when he died, and big and strong an hansom's a picture, with a long, black beard. I don't know if it'll be kinder easy to make it look real like him from this, but they say you're a master hand at the picture business an I guess it'll suit."—Springfield (Mass) Homestead.

In the queen's bench, London, Mr. St. John Bremon, editor of the society journal Piccadilly, brought an action against the proprietor, Mr. Gilbert Smit h, for wrongful dismissal without notice. Defendant claimed that he had a right to dismiss the plaintiff without notice, and further justified himself because Mr. Bremon had adversely criticized the conduct of the Princes of Wales in the beccerat case, and advocated a conservative measure of home rule contrary to instructions. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff. Damages, £400.—Dundee (Scotland) Courier.

Major d'Arlandes, like many another French soldier, was tired of waiting for promotion and opportunities to distinguish himself. He seized an opportunity to enjoy a little excitement and at the same time to remind Louis XVI of his baffled ambitions.

He made a balloon ascension, which at that time was thought to be a very risky affair. The king promptly reproved him for his rashness.

"Your majesty will pardon me, I hope," said the officer, "but the fact is the minister of war has made me so many promises in the air that I went up to look for some of them."—Paris Letter.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHTER.

One of the most delightful of the minor accessories that electricity furnishes to the household is the newly-invented "Electric Lighter." This is a beautiful ornament for the parlor, dining room or chamber, always instantly responsive to a call for light and of valuable service in other ways to the family.

It is operated by pressing the little button seen at the top of the centre rod, when the light instantly appears at the opening under the ornament upon the upper band. It is made of highly polished nickel plate, is but six inches long, and occupies only six square inches on the table or mantle. Its construction is so simple it can be readily taken to pieces and as easily readjusted to working order. It needs no wires or connections, the current of electricity being generated by chemical action within the cylinder. It is perfectly safe, always secure, and a child can operate it.

The material used in the battery is sold by every druggist, and a charge coating but 10c. is sufficient to keep it in constant service for thirty to sixty days. With usual care it will last a lifetime, and if it should become disabled by an unfortunate tumble, any damaged part can be replaced at a trifling expense. Its construction is so handsome and ornamental it will readily find its place among the bric-a-brac of the choicest apartments and is easily portable from room to room.

It will be found a most desirable companion for the merchant or lawyer in his office, the professional man in his study, the student in his lodgings, as well as the housewife, and its neatness and quick responsiveness will recommend it to all.

It is manufactured and sold by the Barr Electric Manufacturing Co., at Nos. 17 and 19 Broadway, New York. The price is $5, a veritable trifle when its beauty and service are considered.

Though originally designed simply for a lighter, it has been found practical to add several useful accessories. A Medical Coil with hand electrodes can be readily attached, by which either gentle or sharp electric shocks can be given to a member of the family afflicted with Nervous Affections, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Sciatica, Headache, etc. This attachment can also be connected by wires to the doors and windows of the house, thus providing the homestead with a complete and perfectly reliable electric burglar alarm, or if in a city, it can be connected with a street wire to the nearest police station. The price of the medical coil $3.50.

Another adjunct is the call bell, which is also easily adjustable and operated by pushing down the central rod, as in a dinner table or call bell. The price of this with 100 feet of wire, is but $1.25.

The merits of this novel invention cannot properly be described in a newspaper article. It needs to be seen to be appreciated. Its beauty, quick service and simplicity of construction make it an instant favorite.

The Marechal Davoust, Princess Eckmuhl, was at eighty-five renowned for her beautiful carriage, superb eyes and beautifully clear skin, which was so white as to rival the snow of her abundant hair. She used only pure water on her face and allowed herself only a very simple diet.

To Whiten One's Hands. Pour some lemon juice into an equal quantity of glycerin and rub your hands with the mixture before going to bed. If you don't mind sleeping with gloves on, that is better still and helps considerably in the task of whitening your hands. In the morning wash your thoroughly in warm water and apply the juice again pure, but only a few drops this time. You must not keep this up too long or your hands will show such a dazzling whiteness as to make all the other young ladies in the vicinity jealous.—New York Herald.
