One of the duties of the republican state convention when it meets on the 5th of October will be to show that the party in the state is independent of Rosewater.

In the last issue of the Independent Chas. E. Verity and Conrad Lindeman said that among the independents there is a strong sentiment in favor of Con Lindeman for clerk. A few months ago Chas. E. Verity and Conrad Lindeman said in the same paper that they were not candidates for village trustees. There was just about as much truth and sincerity in one statement as in the other.

For the past few years everything in Custer county of a political nature has been controlled by the pops. They have "reformed" everything in their own interest and against the interests of the masses and the people have become tired of it and a mass meeting was held a short time ago and a county ticket nominated. Last week the republicans of that county held their convention and endorsed the nominees of the mass convention. The result will be that the reformers-for-office-only in Custer county will be wiped out at the polls next November.

The great race for claims in the Cherokee strip started at noon last Saturday and before night the territory was populated with more than 75,000 men and women. Some got land, some got lots and more got left. Thousands took the first train they could get on for the east and thousands more are at the towns along the border without the means to get away. On the strip murders were numerous, but as every way was straggle to every one else the names and names of the dead are hard to learn. A great deal of suffering was encountered by the home seekers on account of the lack of food and water. Thousands are said to have left in disgust after having secured claims as the land did not prove to be good. Much suffering is certain to befall the settlers; many will die, others will be forced to leave to make a living and others will stick to what they got and eventually come out all right. It is the same as any other new country; you take time and hard work to develop it, but the suddenness with which it has been settled makes its progress certain. If some plan could be devised to attract a crowd like that to the Cherokee strip it would solve the problem of settlement very quickly.

Judge Doane has secured a verdict in the Lancaster county court against the impeachment committee for the $500 balance due him for legal services in the case. The committee undertook to gig back on its contract with him to pay $2,500 but it didn't work. Two thousand dollars is still due to Attorney Greene and we may look for a raid by him through the medium of the courts. Two thousand dollars is a pretty good sum these times and will hold the wolf at bay a good while—provided the saloons are closed.—Fremont Tribune.

For the first time in more than thirty years the tide of emigration has turned away from the shores of the United States and more are going to other countries than are coming here. It is said that a great proportion of those who are leaving are people who came from foreign countries to better their condition financially. During the prosperous times that have for years prevailed they have prospered and now as the hard times have come and many are thrown out of employment they return to their native country and take their savings with them, as they can live much cheaper there than here, and when the good times are again restored they will be ready to return and again enter the labor market.

The report of the consolidation of the Chadron and Alliance land offices and one being done away with at Chadron has stirred up people all along this line of railroad as far as the district extends. There is a strong effort being made to have the districts retained as they have been. The department seems to have fixed it up to suit itself without making any inquiry or investigation as to the convenience or wishes of the settlers. To compel the people of the Chadron land district to do all land business at Alliance would work a hardship which homesteaders are not in a condition to stand. What the idea of the administration can be for abolishing either of the northwest Nebraska land offices can hardly be imagined. The fees of the offices pay the expenses and there can be no plea of economy made by the department and there are enough democrats who are willing to fill the positions. It is hoped that the effort to have the Chadron office continued will be successful.

Great Men Reason, Small Men Fight.

That the higher civilization will discountenance war is so positive a theory of intellectual progress that the enthusiasts are persuaded it will dispel war utterly. In a remarkable speech to have been addressed to veterans of one of the greatest of modern wars, Colonel Henderson, of Iowa, said to the army of the Tennessee on Tuesday: "Art, poetry, romance and history have magnified and glorified the soldier, but the time is coming when these great instruments of power will desert their favorite theme and will pay homage to men who lead the great forces of thought away from the slaughter-house up to the higher fields of human action." And presently he added, "The great man reasons, the small man fights."

No thoughtful man, certainly no man of high-minded benevolence, may dissent from the wisdom of these words. How to dispense with war is one of the essential problems of civilization. That which prevents its solution is the stubborn force of unreason that makes "the small man fight." But until education has eliminated the "small man," by which Colonel Henderson means the small intelligence, the glorious times when all differences may be amicably adjusted in the forum or council chamber is far removed from present survey. The great bulk of mankind is ignorant, easily influenced by prejudices, and altogether too ready to fight either in defense of its assumed rights and privileges, or in support of its convictions, however fallacious.

Inflamed by his passion or led away by his folly, the "small man" precipitates the conflict in which the "great man," having deprecated it with all the seriousness of his reason and with all the earnestness of his soul, is forced, in behalf of principle, honor, humanity, to participate.

No man ever entered upon war measures with more reluctance than those veterans of 1861, to whose representatives Colonel Henderson spoke. It was only when the flag had been fired on and the integrity of the nation assailed that the union men who had deprecated war flamed into the fury of righteous wrath and rushed to the defense of the union. The spectacle was the more sublime because the patriotic impulse was so strong as to turn a nation of peaceful citizens into a camp of soldiers battling for union and peace, and at the close of the struggle the leader of the union forces was the first to say "Let us have peace."

There never was a question or a cause, save that of deliberate invasion for the sake of conquest, that might not have been determined wisely without resort to arms but for the "small man," the headlong, impulsive, inflammable, unthinking majority that frequently overrides or sweeps along with it the "great man," the rational, clear-sighted, justice-defending minority. Though Colonel Henderson has put into the form of an aphorism the working principle of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, it is very doubtful if the end of another thousand years will have seen its exemplification in the conduct of mankind. There must come some speedy, however, the time when the nations shall put away the spirit of war from their councils, and conferences and treaties, and when the fighting will be nothing worse than local eruptions of short duration, not attaining the importance even of internecine strife, but representing insurrections against law, or possibly revolt because of injustice tyrannously exercised. International wars must be few and far between, and internal wars will be looked upon as a species of suicide. The soldier is disappearing from the eye of civilization. America, the greatest nation of the world, thrives without him, and the empire of Germany is witnessing that extreme refulgence of military fame which is the brilliance of the expiring flame. Verily the crown of the future will bear the jeweled words: "The great man reasons; the small man fights."

The Clocks of Paris.

The public clocks of Paris. They are as innumerable as the puff balls of the "what's-o'clock," whose tiny moons mingle with the gold stars of the dandelions which intrude on a summer lawn. But the oldest of them all and, indeed of all France, is this great ornamental clock on the tower of the Palais de Justice. Its date is 1370.

It is best seen from the flower market, on what the people call the little island or Ile de la Cite, recently described by Theodore Child as "A sort of acropolis or secret enclosure devoted to great public monuments."

Imagine yourself, then knee deep among the flowers that crowd the quai to which they give their name. One could forget time altogether in such a perfect surrounding of light, form and color, were it not for the near and sonorous striking of the clock.

Every quarter of an hour this memento mori strikes from the clock tower of the Palais de Justice.—Eleanor E. Grotz in October Godey's.
