The next legislature of Colorado will contain three female members. They will participate in the selection of a United States senator. The start has been made and it will be but a comparatively short time until women will have all the rights of franchise.

It is said that over eighty of the republican members-elect of the next legislature have agreed to support John M. Thurston for the United States senate. That makes his election certain so that a party caucus will not be necessary. All of which is eminently proper and as it should be.

A stock company has been formed for the purpose of putting in a beet sugar factory at North Bend, Neb. The incorporators are Nebraska men and it will be built and operated by Nebraska capital. That is the way the sugar industry of the state will eventually be built up.

There is a story of a discussion by two farmers on the cheapness of horses. One attributed it to electricity in propelling street cars, whilst the other considered it was the popularity of bicycling, the wheels costing nothing for feed. Failing to agree, the farmers appealed to a German bystander. "I will tell you why horses are so cheap," said he, "it's because in Washington there's so many tam shackasses."—Seward Blad.

The next Nebraska legislature should provide for the publication in the newspapers of the laws passed by every session of the legislature. The public is entitled to know what the laws are; it is expected to obey and an immediate publication after their passage in every county of the state would be money well expended.

Every taxpayer would get more for the cent he would contribute than for any other like sum given for the support of the state.—Freemon Tribune.

The candidacy of Rev. J. A. Scammon for the position of chaplain of the senate is meeting with hearty support from all quarters, and especially in the 14th district. It means a great deal more to northwest Nebraska than is apparent at first blush. The unsavory record made by Stewart at the last session places him in a position where he will amount to no more than a cipher with the rim knocked off, for anything he may attempt to get through will be looked upon as a scheme to snare him to get a rake-off or to boom some town in Texas, or to please a female lobbyist, and hence will not stand much chance of being passed. The northwest is very much in need of some legislation and if Scammon is made chaplain of the senate he can do more for this district than can Stewart as a member of that body.

The session of congress which opens last week will be the most uneventful that has been held for years. The result of the recent election was so emphatic that the line of policy adopted by the last session will be hardly attempted and about all that can be done will be to clear up some unimportant details. Both democrats and republicans have concluded that there should be no further tinkering with the tariff as it is necessary to give the business of the country a chance to adapt itself to the new law now in force. It is quite likely that considerable time will be devoted to an attempt to repeal the income tax, but whether or not it will be successful is a question. It is thought by some that a free silver bill will be passed and the president given an opportunity to veto it, but that may be simply a guess.

The Harrison JOURNAL wants to have a state sugar bounty voted by the coming legislature. According to the sworn affidavits of sugar beet growers on file in this office the crop is now far more profitable than average field crops. What's the justice of taxing the man who raises potatoes, or corn or wheat for the benefit of the man who is doing better, raising sugar beets?—Harrison Sign.

It would be a great deal better public policy and a great deal more just to the growers of other crops to be taxed to pay a bounty on beets and thus put the western part of the state in the line of permanent prosperity than to be taxed to do what was done by the legislature in 1891 and what will have to be done at the coming session of the legislature to relieve the settlers in a number of counties in the southern and western portions of the state. Sugar beets are, without doubt, one of the best crops for western Nebraska and the time will come when the sugar industry will be the most important one and will make it a rich and prosperous section, but for years efforts have been made to get it established but so far they have been unsuccessful. If a liberal bounty paid by the state will put the industry on a firmly established basis—and it most certainly will do so—it will be a great thing for the entire state, and the sooner western Nebraska is looked after the better it will be for everyone.

A team was robbed in Texas a few days ago and the robbers secured over a hundred thousand dollars.

The indications are that the state irrigation convention which is to be held at Kearney on Dec. 18th and 19th will be the most important meeting of the kind ever held in the state. It is not the western part of the state alone which is interested in the move but the entire state and at that meeting the needed law will most likely be outlined that it may be prepared and presented to the legislature at an early date.

Wholesome Results.

Blunders and misfortunes followed one another thick and fast. Organized labor to some extent declared that it bore a grudge against the democratic administration on the ground of its policy in the great railroad strike. The independent voters of the east had various reasons of their own for believing that the defeat of the democrats would be salutary. So there arose a great tidal wave which swept the whole country, excepting only some portions of the south where the action and reaction of public opinion are never sensitively registered by means of the ballot box. The result as a whole is encouraging, because it has demonstrated in a hundred ways a revival of intelligent interest in politics, and a capacity on the part of the American people to recognize moral issues and to demand higher and better things in public life and affairs. And this clear verdict for pure politics has been expressed in such a manner that no one has mistak- en it as merely the victory of one party over another. The effect will be to put with parties on their good behavior. The Republicans are not boastful, for they have learned by very recent experience that their use of power will be held in strict account.—From "The Progress of the World," December Review of Reviews.
