

RENEWING THEIR YOUTH.

A STRANGE STORY FROM A NEBRASKA VILLAGE.

The Villagers Excited Over the Increased Health and Vigor of the Older Inhabitants—The Experience of Two "Vets."

World-Herald reporter was attracted by the evidence of renewed activity of some of the older inhabitants of the village of Florence, a suburb of Omaha, Neb., and inquired the cause.

"In July, 1899, while my company was on the march through to Austin, Texas, I was attacked with rheumatism of the worst kind in one leg at Alexander, La. Being weak I was unstruck and remained unconscious for several hours.

"I had given up all faith of being a well man again, when in November last I read in the World-Herald a case of a man who had been entirely cured from ailments in November last, I was suffering by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Mr. R. W. Cowan, keeper of a general store at Florence was also seen by the reporter. Mr. Cowan is also an old soldier, having been a member of the 14th Infantry, Company C, and later of Company M of the 1st Minnesota Cavalry.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppurations, all forms of weakness, chronic constipation, bearing down pains, etc., and in the case of men will give speedy relief and effect a permanent cure in all cases arising from mental stress, overwork, or excessive use of stimulants.

Illinois proposes to tax bachelors too. It looks as if a new name would have to be invented for single blessedness. Now let us have a bill to tax spinners, married people and babies, and we can all be happy as the most thoroughly taxed people in the world.

Illinois proposes to tax bachelors above the age of 32, and with the proceeds of the tax establish an old maids home. This would appear to be equitable, whether constitutional or not.

"We had better go on to the gate, it is not more than half a mile," said Marsden.

"I will go, and perhaps Doctor Weldon will accompany me," replied Winton, "but your prolonged absence will be remarked. You had better show yourself."

"I am with you," cried the doctor, who had tied a large silk pocket handkerchief over his head as a measure of precaution.

"I shall return to the house. It seems hopeless and fruitless to search further. My impression is that the jewels are irreparably lost. They will be out of their settings by to-morrow and can never be identified."

"Still we must do our best," said Marsden. "Come, we'll get a glass of champagne and hear how Mrs. Ruthven is."

The announcement of supper gave every one sufficient and agreeable occupation, so the absence of the host was but little remarked.

Meantime, Mrs. L'Estrange and Nora had gone upstairs to Lady Dorrington's room to gain news of Mrs. Ruthven's condition, and to keep out of the way, the nerves of both had been a good deal shaken.

"She is a good deal quieter," said Lady Dorrington, coming to join them. "She had another fit of hysterical crying, which has relieved her. My maid and her own will sit by her all night in turns, so she will never find herself alone. I have just seen Clifford, who was going to wash and brush away the traces of his search in the shrubbery. They found a mask, a cloak and a long, sharp knife."

"I dare say, but I am sure you ought not to dance any more?"

"Why? My dear cousin, do you think I cannot stand a few tumbles of champagne? Do you suppose I would take more than I could manage? You are positively insulting! Come, I shall never forgive you if you don't finish the wait with me."

"I really would rather not—I am not in the humor for dancing. I should prefer going home—and you are not quite as steady as you ought to be. You are not a bit like yourself. Don't be angry with me, I should be so sorry to vex you, particularly to-night."

"Then take another round. No, I will not let you off!"

"Well, squire, I see Helen at the other side of the room. I will go so far with you, then I will go home."

"Very well! Please, Clifford, be very steady!"

Marsden tried to pass Mrs. L'Estrange, but Nora made a stout resistance, and they presently made Lady Dorrington good night.

"I do not think either of you looked particularly brave or comfortable."

"And now at all fatherly? I order stand. How long was it since you had met?"

"Well, he must be a charming relative," remarked Mrs. Ruthven, with a slight sigh, and for a short while they talked pleasantly of Evesleigh and country life; the various places both had visited on the continent, and the delights of the past season in London.

"It was rather ominous, was it not, that you should express such a wish last night to see all my jewels?" said Mrs. Ruthven. "If you like I will show you what is left of them. Unfortunately I put on the best I possessed to do honor to the Evesleigh revels."

"Thank you very much. I am exceedingly fond of seeing pretty things."

"Come, then," said Mrs. Ruthven, and led the way into her bedroom, where her maid was kneeling beside a huge dress-basket which she was packing. Various garments were scattered about, and the beautiful ball dress of the previous night lay over a sofa.

"Are you going away, then?" exclaimed Nora, seeing these preparations.

"Yes, I leave to-morrow. I feel I cannot shake off the nervous terror which oppresses me while I stay here; besides, I want to be in London. Give me my jewel case, Virginia, and you need not wait."

Mrs. Ruthven walked across to the bay window, in which a long, low, cushioned seat gave room both for herself and her visitor, and drawing a work table near her, placed the large square case upon it.

"My poor lost rubies and diamonds had a case of their own," she said, as she unlocked the one before her with a little golden key which hung round her neck.

Beecham's pills are for biliousness, sick headache, dizziness, dyspepsia, bad taste in the mouth, heartburn, torpid liver, foul breath, sallow skin, coated tongue, pimples, loss of appetite, etc., when caused by constipation; and constipation is the most frequent cause of all of them.

One of the most important things for everybody to learn is that constipation causes more than half the sickness of the world, especially of women, and it can be prevented. Go by the book, free at drug stores, or write B. F. Allen Co., 365 St. N. W., Washington, D. C.

"Plain, but athletic."

Evidently the picture of a woman cleaning house for the first time. Pearlina. She finds that what is always been the hardest kind of work is now comparatively easy, pleasant, quickly done—and in joy and enthusiasm and high spirits, she kicks up her heels. Probably this is an extreme case, but it may be there are numbers of women who, when they clean house first with Pearlina, manifest their pleasure in the same way. You do hear of it, though. They simply tell you that in all the lives the work of house-cleaning has never been so light and satisfactory, so soon over, so thoroughly well done.
