Fairbury, Neb., Banker Cured.
Fairbury, Neb., Nov. 20, 1896.
Gentlemen—Three years ago I passed since you treated me for piles. The treatment you gave me was so effective, the cure so complete, that since the day I left your office, I am entirely cured and know a moment's pain or inconvenience from my former trouble. I never expected to be cured from either of the complaints and I believe I am as free from either of these ailments as a person can be. I am very grateful to you for what you have done for me. Very sincerely yours,
GEORGE W. HANSEN,
President Hardware Bank.

After Suffering For Thirty Years.
Beatrice, Neb., Nov. 17, 1896.
Gentlemen—I am thankful that I can write and say that I am entirely cured of both fistula and piles, after suffering for thirty years and to such an extent that at times I could not stand for weeks. Since I was treated by you six and one-half years ago, I have not felt the least inconvenience from either of the complaints and I believe I am as free from either of these ailments as a person can be. I am very grateful to you for what you have done for me. Very sincerely yours,
W. B. CONLEY,
President Hardware Bank.

We guarantee a cure of any case of rectal trouble—and do not accept one cent of pay until the patient is well.

HOW BADEN POWELL TRAINS HIS SCOUTS

Among the reservists impatiently awaiting "their country's call" is a troop of the 5th Dragoon of Baden-Powell's special scout in India.

Fox is one of a body unique in the British army. When Baden-Powell was appointed colonel of the Fifth Dragoon one of the first things he did was to form a body of scouts, to whose training he gave the benefit of his own vast and peculiar experience. Beginning with six volunteers he increased the number to thirty, and made them a very body of cavalry scouts. Fox was such as no other British reservist possesses. Baden-Powell's special are probably the only thoroughly trained cavalry scouts in the British army.

The neighborhood of Meerut, where the Fifth Dragoon lay, offered splendid facilities for the work of scouting in all directions he led his body of human pets and taught them to excel in their work by the simple process of scouting one another. Upon the present different views of the world, a "North pole," to be worn upon the arm.

His first act was to present the men a number of copies of "The Adventure" and cheerfully recommend any one suffering to your care. I was thoroughly cured seven years ago and have never been troubled since. Yours respectfully,
JAMES McGOVERN.

DEADWOOD'S OLD STAGE COACH

Lying in the dust beside one of the streets is Deadwood, S. D., old, dilapidated, and dust-covered, there is a rambling stage coach that, in the eyes of some of the ten young Americans, was an almost sacred relic.

It is a relic of the old days, the atmosphere of the time novel, Deadwood Dick and Alkali Ike have sat on its driver's seat and pumped hot lead into the painted red-skins that were attacking it, but its day is done and it cannot last much longer. It was a relic of the time novel, Deadwood Dick and Alkali Ike have sat on its driver's seat and pumped hot lead into the painted red-skins that were attacking it, but its day is done and it cannot last much longer.

During the year 1876, two years after the arrival of the Russell expedition at "Custer," the organization of the Cheyenne and Black Hills stage line was effected and the first stage coach was sent out from Cheyenne for Custer. The Indians were unusually troublesome at that time, and the proprietors of the stage company were afraid that their adventure might come to a disastrous end because of the ravages of the "wild" day in the summer of 1876 this first stage coach was started out from Cheyenne with a load of passengers and baggage, and with the famous driver "California Charlie" and four strong horses.

A constant lookout was kept for Indians throughout the journey, but here was no incident worthy of mention on the long trip, and the coach reached Custer City in safety. The miners of that camp were wild over the event and the old town turned out that night for a genuine celebration. The following day "California Charlie," who had kept a level head during the festivities of the night previous, made preparations for a return trip to Cheyenne. There was enough wood for passengers to fill the coach several times and lots were drawn, there being about twelve numbers.

About 9 o'clock on a July day, "California Charlie" cracked his whip over the heads of his leaders and the start was made across the wilderness which lay between Custer and Cheyenne. Everything went well until the stage coach reached an old creek bed, a few miles out of Custer. Here, without a moment's warning, a band of Indians suddenly sprang from ambush and commenced pouring in a heavy fire upon the coach and passengers. "California Charlie" piled his whip and there was a run of a few miles, the driver suddenly dropped over in his seat and fell into the boot of the coach, and a bullet having gone through his head, the horses came to a standstill and stood waiting for a word from the driver.

The Indians came up behind the coach on a mad run and in a moment he coach was surrounded. The twelve passengers were nimbly slipped out of the coach, a few others with more grit, attempted to shoot at the coach window at the dodging Indians. It seemed to be the delight of the red skins to tease their prisoners. They would ride up near the coach and fire directly at the passengers, care being taken, seemingly, that the bullet should strike a coat sleeve, hat or sea ushion.

Finally, two of the Indians dismounted from their ponies and, going up to the horses on the coach, cut then loose, and with a wild yell drove the frightened team with harness on wheels. That was the last seen of the Indians or the horses. The passengers walked twelve miles to Custer. A posse pursued the Indians, but their start had been in the night, and the coach was brought back to Custer for a fresh start. "Bye-bye," the trip being accomplished without any trouble.

The same coach made frequent trips to Custer during the summer of 1876 and on September 25, of the same year, "Bye-bye" was made into Deadwood. The distance from Deadwood to Cheyenne was about 200 miles, through an intensely hostile country. As soon as the stage route was thoroughly established, traffic became heavy. For a number of years, up to 1881, all of the mail from the Black Hills company's mine was shipped out under heavy guard by this stage route. It was a serious trip to make with the gold seekers, and every man went with the fiercest guard.

The Northwestern Express, Stage and Transportation company, organized under the laws of Minnesota, commenced running a daily line of stage coaches on May 1877, from Bismarck to the Pacific Railway company. The line was transferred in 1880 from Bismarck to Pierre, where it connected with the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, and in 1886 it made connection with the Northern, Elkhorn & Missouri Valley railroad at Chadron, Neb. The company established a line of Cavalry detachments between Pierre and Deadwood in 1880, and carried an average of 2,000 passengers and 11,000,000 pounds of freight and baggage yearly. For a number of years, up to 1881, all of the mail from the Black Hills company's mine was shipped out under heavy guard by this line for the years 1881 and 1882. The company employed 250 men, 600 horses and 2,000 oxen.

The coming of the railroads to the Black Hills marked the decline of the stage coach and with the different lines were soon devoid of traffic.

ENORMOUS GROWTH.

Eleven Large and Growing Institutions are the Result of Meritorious Work For Mankind.

THE KHARAS INFIRMARIES. The readers of this paper are aware of many of the wonderful cures, made without the use of drugs or surgery, which have been effected by the Kharas Infirmary of the great modern scientist, Prof. Theo. Kharas, of Nebraska City; but many do not know of the enormous progress of his work in assuming. Besides the great Nebraska Magnetic Infirmary and the Nebraska School of Magnetism at Nebraska City, he has established Kharas Magnetic Infirmary at the following places: Plattsmouth, Neb., Miss Minnie Correll, Manager; Auburn, Neb., Prof. B. L. McEldon, Manager; Brock, Neb., Prof. C. W. Peterson, Manager; Hamburg, Ia., Prof. C. M. Adams, Manager; Falls City, Neb., Prof. H. A. Fritz, Manager; Sycamore, Ia., Prof. C. Fredrickson, Manager; Nebraska City, Neb., Prof. A. Gillett, Manager; Red Oak, Ia., Prof. C. E. Blair, Manager; Froid, Neb., Simmons & Ketherby, Managers.

All of these managers and their assistants are graduates of the Nebraska School of Magnetism, and are thorough and reliable operators. Other infirmaries are being located as fast as competent men and women can be found to take charge of them.

Prof. Kharas is the founder and originator of the science of PHRENOPATHY. By its use he cures many diseases without ever seeing the patient. Read the following sworn statement from a little boy:

This is to certify that my little boy, Roy, was suffering from the effects of Spinal Meningitis, so that when we would cure him in his bed he would scream with pain. His spine hurt him so badly that he had no use of his limbs at all, and so could not walk. I had heard of Prof. Kharas, but had no faith in his work, but knowing there was no other chance, I had other physicians and they could do nothing for my boy. I went to see him. He told me he would cure Roy by what he called the Absorbent Method, and that I was to go home and leave the matter all to him. Although Roy had been constantly growing worse, two weeks walked to Prof. Kharas' office without help. He is now perfectly well, and was only treated by the Absorbent Method. I now believe Prof. Kharas can cure any disease under the sun, and a great many without seeing the patient, as he has cured my boy. Respectfully,
"MRS. M. J. BITTLEMAN."

LYNCHING IN KANSAS.
Topeka, Kas.—(Special.)—Governor Stanley is quoted as declaring he will recommend to the next legislature that the crimes act, fixing the punishment for murder, be amended so that the jury shall decide that question, and the jury, having fixed the punishment, the judge's only duty shall be to execute to judgment. This would restore in Kansas capital punishment for murder, which the present law practically abolishes. The recent double lynching at Fort Scott is believed to have influenced the governor.

Kansas City, Mo.—Edward and George Meeks, lynched on Saturday night at Fort Scott, were buried in Oak Grove cemetery here. The funeral took place at the home of Mrs. Edward Meeks, widow of one of the men, and George Meeks, of Pueblo, Colo., and the victim's mother were among those present. Dr. Stephen A. Northrup, pastor of the First Baptist church, preached the sermon and condemned the mob's act.

ELECTRIC HOME TREATMENT

SENT ON TRIAL.

A POSITIVE AND PERMANENT CURE FOR THE MOST OBSTINATE CHRONIC DISEASES.

Our New Galvanic Electric Home Treatment Proves a Wonderful Benefaction to the Suffering and Afflicted.

As thousands of sufferers know to their detriment, the medical treatment of most chronic diseases is not only ineffectual, but very injurious if long continued. Galvanic Electricity, properly employed, is the only remedy that can successfully cope with this class of maladies, being not only devoid of all harmful effects, no matter how long used, but it gives far more speedy and permanent results.

Dr. J. Atkins of London, one of the oldest living authorities, who has studied and used Galvanic electricity for more than thirty years, writes: "I have used it for over forty years and declare that it is the only way to prevent old age and prolong life. He lays the charge against doctors who have not used Galvanic electricity in the treatment of disease. The difficulty has not been how to produce efficient apparatus, but how to supply it with reach of the means of all. In the plan we offer all difficulties are successfully met, so that the patient, at a little expense, the benefit of our efficient apparatus, of thousands of dollars outlay, can be obtained in any location, and in the treatment of all diseases. This includes apparatus, electrodes, instruments and specific directions how and where to apply in the treatment of each disease so as to secure the best results.

Our Galvanic apparatus for home use is so constructed as to give the real vitalizing and tonic properties of electricity without shock or harmful effects, and is adapted for children and even feeble infants or aged persons, whom it makes strong and vigorous. It is so arranged that the strength can be graded to suit different ages, constitutions and diseases. This method is especially adapted for self-treatment of all female afflictions, nervous debility, chronic kidney troubles, rheumatism, neuralgia, weak circulation, sexual weakness, debilitated conditions and all disorders depending upon impaired action or nerve exhaustion.

Persons afflicted by erysipelas, eczema, rheumatism, electric belts, etc., when you can get a guaranteed, self-acting galvanic apparatus at less expense. It lasts a lifetime and will be your "family physician." Write for full particulars.

QUEIR RESULT OF LAW.
Fort Dodge, Ia.—(Special.)—An important decision was rendered here today by Judge Whitaker. It involved a question of paying for paving between the tracks of the street railway. The case was that of the Electric Light and Power company vs. the city of Fort Dodge. J. H. Abel, county treasurer; J. W. Campbell and Iowa National bank of Des Moines, intervenors. Campbell and the bank had secured a temporary injunction restraining a collection of the certificates. This injunction was made permanent and the certificates, amounting to $2,500, were declared null and void, a decision unique in the legal history of Iowa.
