RICHARDS & JONES.

Our Latest Doctrine.

In answer to Spain's claim that the $250,000 found in the captured Spanish vessels at Santiago belongs to the Secretary Root has advanced the American doctrine of "finders keepers."—Washington Post.

Possibly You Have.

"Have you ever noticed," inquired the thoughtful theorist, "that the rich man who says there's no happiness in wealth never seems to be disposed to exchange places with his poor neighbor?"

Stories of Wolves' Feroocity.

A terrible encounter with wolves took place recently near Folksham, in Moldavia, Roumania, recently. A party of seven peasant carci singers were set upon close to the little station of Sibila by a pack of wolves ravenous with hunger. The young fellows, who were unarmed, except for their sticks, fought with the courage of despair, and one after the other was dragged to the ground and horribly mangled, until three alone were standing badly mangled, but still struggling. At this juncture a train steamed up, the passengers rushed to the aid of the apparently doomed trio, and succeeded with shouts and sticks in driving off the terrible beasts of prey. At no great distance from the spot several peasants who were sleighing to the market with a litter of pigs only escaped by abandoning their living freight one by one, and only reached their destination as the last pig was thrown to the wolves.

WHY THEY WERE CHEAP.

President McKinley Used to Tell a Story with a Moral.

President McKinley used to tell with a good deal of amusement a story which he learned to his early days in the law. On the way to and from his office he would sometimes pass a butcher shop, and for a long time was puzzled by a certain notice which he saw there in the morning, he would read, "Good pork sausages 20 cents." On his return in the evening he would sometimes find those sausages still 20 cents a pound, but more often the notice was changed and the sign read: "Fine pork sausages 12"—or sometimes 10—"cents."

"The matter, he said, used to worry him. Sausages were not so perishable a nature that they would not keep till the next day, and he could not understand it. So one evening he stopped at the shop, made some casual remark, and then inquired the price of sausages.

"Ten cents," said the shopkeeper. "But," replied Mr. McKinley, "the were 20 cents this morning."

"So they were, Mr. McKinley," replied the butcher. "So they were. Then I had 'em, now I haven't. Sausages at 10 cents is simply to get me a reputation for cheapness. See?"

The future president saw, and was in the habit of saying that a great many reputations were made in this way.—Youth's Companion

"I trust, Mr. Brown," said a smart young lady to the young man who was about to depart, "that you will spend one more evening with us before we move into our new house." "Delighted, I assure you," replied the young man, beaming with satisfaction. "By the way, when do you expect to move?" "I am not positive as to the exact date," she answered, "but the workmen began excavating for the foundation yesterday, and we expect to be able to move in about eight or ten months."—Philadelphia Ledger
