"DUCKS" NEEDED A SWIM.

Irishman's Advice Embarrassed Young Naval Officer.

At the June polo games of the Philadelphia Country club George Gould, like all other players, wore breeches of white duck. On the porch of the club house he said, one afternoon, looking down at his breeches with a frown:

"Duck trousers always remind me of one incident that happened aboard a battleship last summer. The battleship was one of those that lay off Newport, and I was visiting it. The day was fine, and a multitude of little boats were circling about, bent on seeing all that could be seen.

"There was a young officer on board who must have sat down accidentally on a fresh-painted bench or something of that kind, for his white duck trousers were very dirty. He, though, was not aware of it. He moved among the ladies gallantly, and his trousers were an eyesore. Suddenly some one on one of the little boats below caught sight of them and in a stereotyped Irish voice shouted: "Och, misther, wouldn't yer ducks be better for a swim?"—Kansas City Journal.

Good Blood in Their Veins.

Ethnologists of the Smithsonian Institution have investigated the Filipinos, with results that are of rare interest to science, says Scientist American. They have called attention to the fact that in the veins of the tribes of the archipelago flows the blood of all the races and varieties of mankind.

Insect Balloonists.

Insects enjoying aerial navigation by the use of balloons were recently caught by a French naturalist, who noticed them as small, bright objects floating in the air and behaving as if they were being steered. He caught some of them and found them to be viscous air bubbles one-fourth of an inch long, of uniform dimensions and showing iridescent reflections. Each balloon was suspended by the feet of an insect resembling the hornet fly.
