THE MOVEMENT OF STOCKS.

Different Effects Produced in Different Localities.

Russell Harding, known as one of the finest of the splendid corps of officials that George Gould has gathered about him for the administration of his railroads, believes that the business of a railroad official is running a railroad, not making stocks move.
He was interviewed not long ago by a reporter who asked many questions about the railroad, and finished his series with this one:

"When do you think the stock will begin to move, Mr. Harding?"

"It's moving now," said the general manager. "We had several hundred cars a day into Kansas City. They complain that the conditions are not just right."

"I mean the securities—the stocks," interrupted the reporter.

Mr. Harding smiled, but said disgustfully, "I don't know anything about it. When we move stock out west helps to pay Missouri Pacific dividends, but when they move it he it doesn't seem to help anything, except, perhaps, the Waldorf bar."—

An Anecdote of Czar Reed.

A characteristic incident in the life of Thomas B. Reed was recalled this week by a Washington hostess. He entertained the former speaker at a dinner party. Some time after the soup and before the coffee Mr. Reed disappeared, and it was believed that he had been called out for some conference on a political matter. Hours after the dinner was over and the last guest had departed, one of the family went to the coat room and discovered, to her surprise, the bary-figure of the speaker, curled up in a chair, reading a book. As she stood watching him he finished the last page, regretfully laid down the volume and studied the cover for a moment. As his eyes finally left the book and wandered up, he beheld his hostess. "What is the book?" she queried, with feminine tactfulness.
"The Jungle Book; I never read it before, and I had to finish it."
