Scarcely a person comes in here who does not make inquiries, and want to see what we have, and to express regret that we haven't more. I firmly believe that more people have assiduously read books and articles dealing with ancient Egypt since this Luxor affair than ever before."

HUAJATOLLA—II (Spanish Peaks)

IN THE dim and distant ages, savage tribes from the northland came out of a thundering cloud and drove away the people who lived in the quiet, peaceful valley at the foot of the Twin Peaks. But the Rain Gods, who dwell on the peaks withheld the rain and the invaders were forced to die, for the land became a great and waterless desert.

But the invaders, who had conquered the country, and then abandoned it when the gates of rain were closed, had meanwhile established a mighty empire in the south, extending from ocean to ocean and far into the north.

They had numerous stone gods which they worshipped, and images of these gods they placed over all the land. It was their custom that these stone gods should be decked with gold and silver which they took from the rocks in their own country.

But when the gold and silver became scarce they journeyed northward once more and made their way even to Huajatolla, Breasts of the World, where the clouds are born that make the summer rains. And here they found much gold, fairest and brightest of all they had found.

And the gold they found in untold quantities, and expeditions were made year after year. Despite all they took the gold became no less, but "those above," who rule the world at last intervened—for they became fearful of the power of the stone gods. They placed evil spirits on Mount Huajatolla, driving away the treasure seekers forever.

Wrathful at all mankind the Rain Gods became, and they filled all the valleys with rock and earth; fire demons they brought, and although they are invisible they manifest their power in many ways, giving word of their presence through great rumblings in the bosom of the mountains and by vapors and smokes and fires, which poured from the summit of the peaks and made the land a desert and a wilderness where no man might live.

So were the treasure seekers driven away, and the Rain Gods ruled that no man should again find the treasure, which was theirs, and the invaders were again forced into the southland, where they had built their great empire; and there they could worship their stone gods as they pleased, but no more could they take of the gold that belonged to the Rain Gods, who dwell on the summit of Huajatolla.

From that time the Valley of the Rising Sun, which was a region fairer than any, became a place of gloom—and henceforth it was called the "Valley of the Evil Spirits," as it is called to this day.

Note—The above legend is beyond question of Aztec origin—probably embellished and increased by the northern tribes who repeat it. It shows traces of Hopi alteration, but certainly comes of that great Shoshoni family of which the Hopi and Aztecs are both descendants.

Furniture Style Origin.

The story of modern furniture rightly begins with the crumbling of the Middle Ages. The baronial hall stage, with its religious formality, combined with its rugged simplicity, was being followed by a more withdrawn, domestic and luxurious life. As always, this was reflected in the furniture. The strong and simple high and narrow Gothic style, with its characteristic pointed arch, began to be debased.

France is said to be the first country to be influenced by the Italian Renaissance, but there the Gothic and the classic clashed. The process of grafting the Italian style on the Gothic hardly began in England until 1550, when it was nearly completed in France. By the end of Elizabeth's reign, 1603, there was a semblance of unity, and the Jacobean period created itself.

Going to "Complet."

In Paris, when a street car is full, the driver hangs out a sign saying Complet, and the car does not stop for passengers. A time-honored joke on the green tourist is to tell him of the wonders of Complet and direct him where he can get a car for the place. Of course the tourist waits an exasperating time for a Complet car to take him aboard. Then doubtless he sees the joke, and would like to find the joker.—Youth's Companion.

SAVED LIFE SAYS MRS. WAGENAAR

Portland Lady Fell Off 40 Pounds, but Declares Tanlac Restored Her Fully.

"For nine years," declared Mrs. Ella Wagenaar, 268 Graham St., Portland, Ore., recently, "I was almost a nervous wreck and never knew what it was to feel well.

"I was suffering from a general breakdown and, oh, it's just impossible to describe the pain and misery I endured. My stomach was so disordered I could scarcely retain a morsel of solid food. I lost forty pounds and was so weak I tottered like an infant when I walked. Many nights I never slept a wink, and I had weak spells, when I fainted dead away.

"After spending over a thousand dollars trying to get well, my husband finally persuaded me to take the Tanlac treatment. Well, that was the turning point, for all my troubles are gone now. I have almost regained my lost weight, and I've never enjoyed finer health. I will always believe Tanlac saved my life, and I'm so happy and grateful that I just can't help praising it."

MIXUP THAT WAS AMUSING

Humorous Nova Scotian Unintentionally Very Gravely Misled Serious-Minded Glasgow Newspaper.

R. M. MacGregor told the following story at a luncheon of the Scottish curlers in New Glasgow: A New Glasgow shipping firm was having built a steamship on the Clyde and gave it the name of Miemac. The oddity of the name aroused considerable curiosity. The Nova Scotian captain was asked the derivation of the name. Good-naturedly the captain replied that "Mie" was for the Irish and "Mac" for the Scottish. Next day the captain was astonished to find this explanation of the name featured in the Herald. He sent for the reporter and explained that "Miemac" was the name of a tribe of Indians in Nova Scotia. To his further astonishment the following day the Herald carried a correction, reading as follows:

"We were slightly incorrect in giving the derivation of the name 'Miemac' in yesterday's issue. We now learn that the ship is called Miemac after a tribe of wild Indians in Nova Scotia, who are half Irish and half Scotch."

and that steps are being taken to utilize them commercially.—Chemical Trade Journal.

Almost a Monopoly.

"In the United States," remarked the man who can remember figures, "there are 12,357,000 motorcycles, according to the automotive division of the federal Department of Commerce. Do you realize what that means? I've done a little figuring and I ascertained that it means that out of every six motorcycles operated in the world five of them are to be found within the United States of America. The world's motorcycles total 14,622,000. About 2,000,000 of this number are trucks. In Europe, according to the same authority, motorcycles, without side cars, are taking the place of the low-priced car. Over there are more than 680,000 motorcycles, about three times as many as are registered in this country.

Psychology.

Robert is only eight years old but he has some ideas of his own and he dislikes compliments about his flaxen hair. At school he overheard some of the teachers say that anything could be accomplished with a knowledge of "self-applied psychology." On returning home he said:

"Mamma, where can I get a book that tells about self applied psychology?"
"Why, Robert, what do you wish to do?" she asked.
"I want to see if it will turn my hair black," was the answer.

NAME TOO MUCH FOR THEM

Hawaiian Natives Found It Practically Impossible to Translate "Roosevelt" into Their Language.

The village of Roosevelt has changed its name back to Kukoo. Not many persons, probably, know where this village is. It is situated in an obscure corner of one of the Hawaiian islands, and some years ago it had as one of its residents a Dr. E. S. Goodhue, who was anxious that the name of the famous president should never die out of this section of American territory. So he got up a petition to the postmaster general at Washington, asking that the original name of the village should be altered, as far as the mail was concerned, to Roosevelt.

The request was granted, but the new name bothered the natives terribly. They have no "r" or "s" or "t" in their alphabet, and the nearest Hawaiian equivalent to Roosevelt turns out to be Lukiweki. So they sent a second petition, in which they stated that they were desolved into signing the first, and asked that the native name of the village be restored. The petition has been granted.

Smoke Bombs as Signals.

Long Beach, California, life savers send up a smoke bomb when about to make a rescue, and need assistance. It has been proved that a boat can approach a bather in distress more safely and rapidly from the seashore than if it were to start from shore through the breakers. The smoke bomb is the signal for the boat to leave immediately for the scene.

Straight Silica Glass.

A deposit of silica mineral of volcanic origin has been found in Czechoslovakia, which can be used directly in the manufacture of glass without the need of adding any of the other common ingredients used in making up the glass batch. This silica mineral is said to resemble lava and it is understood that the deposits are very large.
