A PORK-BARREL VICTORY

Mr. Taxpayer emerged from the legislative hall of the Nebraska house Thursday noon badly mused up. He had come in contact with the Pork Barrel and as a result was badly flattened, says last Friday's Lincoln Daily Star.

That tells the story of the most inexcusable failure of the present legislature to perform its duty in practicing real economy, and at the same time providing for the pressing needs of the state and its numerous agencies. The test came when the house had before it for consideration the appropriation bill providing for the four state normal schools located at Peru, Kearney, Chadron and Wayne.

The bill carried the original budget estimate of $1,275,000 submitted to the finance committee by Governor Bryan. A motion had been presented to reduce the appropriation 30 per cent and later as a compromise it was suggested that a cut of 15 per cent be made. Finally 10 per cent was offered as a reduction. And when that failed, Minority Leader Theo Osterman suggested an amendment, which would have favored expenditure of any part of the $1,250,000 maintenance fund for continuance of the two years' advanced work, which has been recently added to the normal courses for the purpose of conferring bachelor degrees upon their graduates. It likewise, was rejected.

What are the facts?

This newspaper has no quarrel with any of the normal schools. It reiterates the sentiments expressed only a few days ago in pointing out the discrimination shown in handling the normal school appropriation as contrasted with the state university. It believes the normals are engaged in a very necessary and laudable work of preparing the teachers, who are charged with the responsibility of educating the youth of Nebraska. The normals are entitled to adequate funds for their proper support but neither the normals nor the state university need expect the hard-pressed taxpayers to lightly overlook the matter of duplication in activities in different institutions.

Duplication means waste and extravagance.

A previous legislature had forced the board of regents of the University of Nebraska to establish a Teachers' college at the university. It came as a result of the insistent demand of Nebraska educators for an opportunity to pursue their professional studies further without journeying to Columbia, or some other eastern institution, offering advanced training for teachers. As originally planned the Teachers' college of the state university offered advanced training for teachers. Its activities expanded beyond the original conception.

Then the normals became ambitious, and added two years to their course of instruction, duplicating in a large measure, the advanced work which the Teachers' college was expected to offer. Today Nebraska is supporting five institutions, all striving towards the same goal. The intense competition between them has necessarily been expensive and wasteful—a drain upon the taxpayers which cannot be justified today in the face of the need for the most rigid economy. Sane business judgment cropped out in the report of the committee investigating the state university in its suggestion relative to that situation. The investigating committee recommended that the normals be prohibited from continuing the advanced training which they have been giving in recent years. The members suggested that the Teachers' college provide the last two years of work. The committee thought that the centralization of advanced training at one college would be more economical than to provide it at four institutions unless the standards of training were to be very materially lowered.

Rep. Dan Garber, a member of the university investigating committee, offered the motion to slash the appropriation for the four normals. He did so in the belief that the house was sincere in its protestations of eliminating duplication. He may take a great deal of pride in the fight which he made, for he proved himself a better friend of the normals and the university than those whose eyesight was obscured by the pork barrel.

The fight is over so far as the house is concerned.

Yet, some legislature will tackle the problem, and the normals, refusing to heed the insistent demand that extravagance and waste, as represented in duplication, be eliminated, will suffer. They will suffer because as a business proposition it will be cheaper to maintain one high grade college for training the teachers of Nebraska than it is to support four separate institutions with state funds each striving to outdo the other.

When that day arrives the "pork barrel" politicians in the legislature will regret that they failed to recognize the proper functions of Nebraska's normals, and endeavored to cooperate their activities with the Teachers' college of the state university.
