Tuesday afternoon, July 14, was fearfully hot. The wind came from the south, and felt as if it had passed through half-a-dozen fiery furnaces. About dark the sky was overcast with clouds, and the signs were of a big storm, but it passed off with a slight sprinkle.

Dr. McBride and Ed Garber spent Wednesday in Red Cloud. Ed was in such a big hurry to attend the celebration that he left without eating his dinner and before arriving in Hastings he discovered what ailed him.
