LIBRARY NOTES

With vacations over activities begin to center once again in the home circle and books enter into the scheme of things to an even greater degree than in the months just past. In view of this fact the library has added a number of new books with which it will be well to spend some of the long evenings. Among them are:

"The Mind in the Making" by James H. Robinson. In which the author tries to find an explanation of why men fail to solve the problems of the day. The book is an earnest plea for honest thinking and an open attitude of mind in regard to the facts of history as a guard against making similar mistakes in the future.

"The Life of Christ" by Giovanni Papini. Translated from the Italian by Dorothy Canfield. A work by Italy's foremost man of letters which has attracted such attention in the language it was written and the many lives which it has been translated. A fervid, eloquent and still simple narrative based on the Gospel material, recreating both character and places with unusual vividness and color and attempting continually to "show in that tragic epic the many teachings suited to our time and to our life."

Do you want to know something about repairing your automobile? Consult our new "Dyke's Automobile and Gasoline Engine Encyclopedia." The elementary principles, construction, operation and repair of automobiles, gasoline engines an automobile electric systems, including trucks, tractors and motorcycles, simple, thorough and practical.

If you are looking for some good ideas for the party you are planning our new "Book of Games and Parties" by Theresa Wolcott will help you out wonderfully. It contains games, stunts, menus, costume and house decoration schemes for every kind of holiday or special occasion party.

The "Burgess Flower Book for Children" by T. W. Burgess is told in story form for the younger children and is a companion book to the "Burgess Animal Book" and the "Burgess Bird Book." Good illustrations from photographs, many in color.

New books of poetry by our poets of today:

Passing Throng—by Edgar A. Guest
April Twilights—by Willa Cather.
North of Boston—by Robert Frost
Collected Poems—by Vachel Lindsay.

The New Poetry—by Harret Monroe.

Teachers will find especially helpful the "School Book of Forestry" and "Trees as Good Citizens" both by Chas. L. Pack and published by the American Tree Association. Also four new volumes on "Nature Study for Boys and Girls" by J. B. Craig, for the third, fourth, fifth and sixth grades; four new Geographical and Industrial Readers—Asia, South America, the New Europe and the United States by Nellie B. Allen and the "School History of Nebraska" based on the J. Sterling Morton and Albert Watkins history and edited by James A. Beattie.

New books added to our latest fiction shelf are:

North of 36—by Emerson Hough.
Men Life Gods—by H. G. Wells.
West of the Water Tower—Anonymous.
Feet of Clay—by Bertha Tuttle.
The Alaskan—J. O. Curwood.
The White Flag—Gene S. Porter.
A Lost Lady—Willa Cather.
His Children's Children—Arthur Train.

Other new books of fiction are: Manslaughter—Miller.
Jim Hands—Child.
Desert Valley—Gregory
Twisted Trails—Oyen.
Wrong Twin—Wilson.
The Borough Treasurer—Fletcher
The Custard Cup—Livingston
Gunsight Pass—Raine
Highrider—Raine
God's Country and the Woman—Curwood
Painted Meadows—Ker.
Paradise Bend—White
The Untamed—Bland
Twenty-fourth of June—Richmond
Way of an Eagle—Delt

The library has a copy of the New York Nation which contains the article on "Nebraska" by Willa Sibert Cather.
