

Wreck survivors tell how tobacco kept them going

When food and water gave out on third day, they smoked until rescued

Perhaps they were only pirates of the sea, and deserved no great charity from the hand of Fate. Nevertheless, they were very much human beings when they found themselves miles out to sea adrift in an open boat.

With two days' supply of food and water, they confidently expected to be rescued in plenty of time. But when the third day passed and no friendly sail appeared on the horizon, it began to look like a case for Davy Jones's locker.

One of the victims, crazy with thirst, suggested that they divide a bottle of iodine and end the agony quickly.

"The tobacco hasn't given out yet," said another. "Let's stick it out a while longer." And they did.

Late in the afternoon of the fifth day a tramp schooner saw their distress signals and came valiantly to the rescue.

"The only thing that kept us going at all was tobacco," one of the survivors admitted when he was safely deposited on dry land again. "We smoked and chewed, and that sort of kept us up."

Tobacco is certainly a poor substitute for food and water—but under the stress of trying circumstances smoking a pipe is a big help.

Pipes filled with Edgeworth probably have no more soothing effect than pipes filled with other tobaccos, but most Edgeworth smokers somehow feel that they need Edgeworth to get complete pipe satisfaction.

If you have never smoked Edgeworth, send your name and address on a postcard to Larus & Brother Company. They will be glad to send you free samples—generous helpings both of Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed.

Smoke a few pipefuls and judge for yourself whether or not you wish to become a permanent member of the Edgeworth Club.

Edgeworth is sold in various sizes to suit the needs and means of all purchasers. Both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed are packed in small, pocket-size packages, in handsome humidor holding a pound, and also in several handy in-between sizes.

For the free samples, kindly address Larus & Brother Company, 80 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va. If you will also include on your postcard the name and address of your regular tobacco dealer, your courtesy will be appreciated.

To Retail Tobacco Merchants: If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one- or two-dozen carton of any size of Edgeworth Plug Slice or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

PARKS LINK TWO NATIONS

International Auto Highway Connects American and Canadian Beauty Spots

BEAUTY IS INTERNATIONAL

The so-called national parks of the world are not national save in name. They are no more national than is good music, classical literature, beautiful pictures. They belong to the world. We people of Canada feel that the beauty spots within the United States that have been designated as national parks belong to us as they belong to you. They are but placed within the keeping of the people of the States. We feel and we hope that the people of the United States feel, that the beauty spots of Canada that have been designated as national parks are as much your parks as they are our parks, that they are merely placed within our keeping for the use of all. Beauty is international, regardless of the form in which it is expressed, and national parks are but the natural beauty spots of the world preserved for the people of the world.—J. B. Harkin, Commissioner, Canadian National Parks Branch, Department of Interior, Canada.

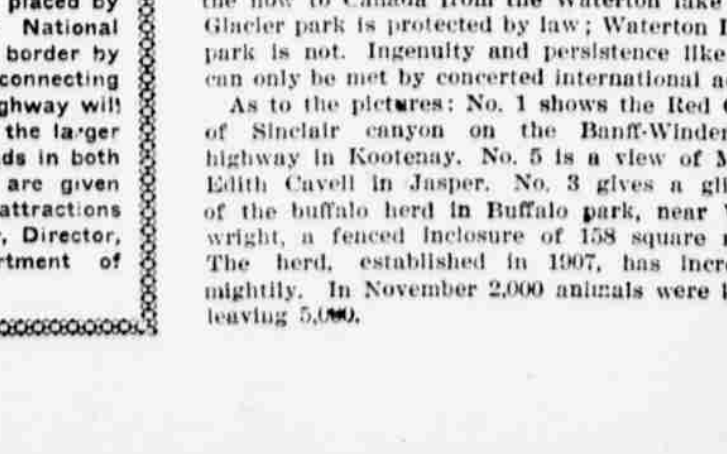

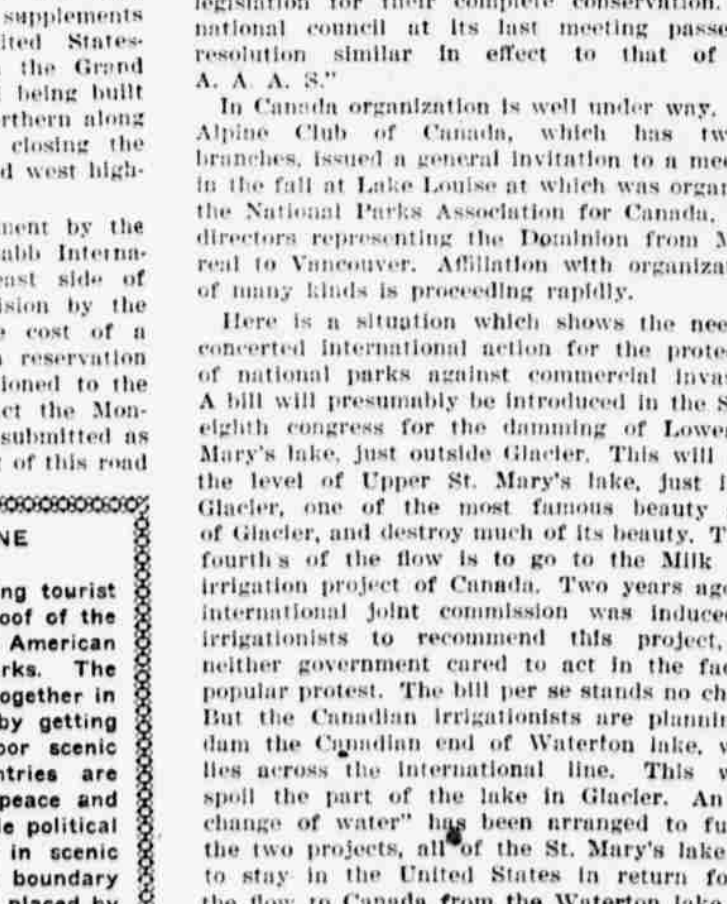

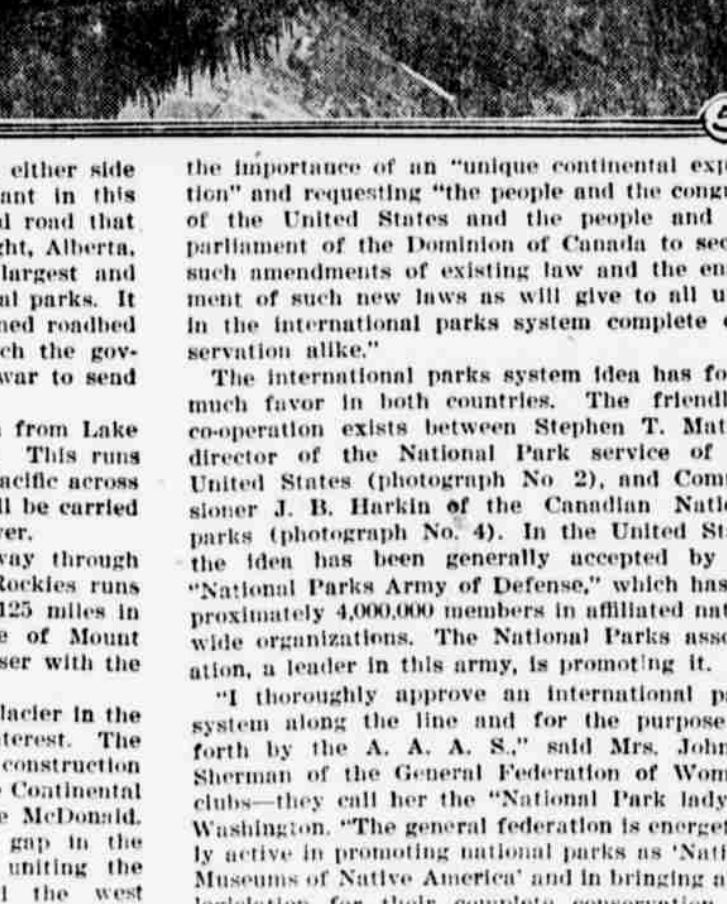

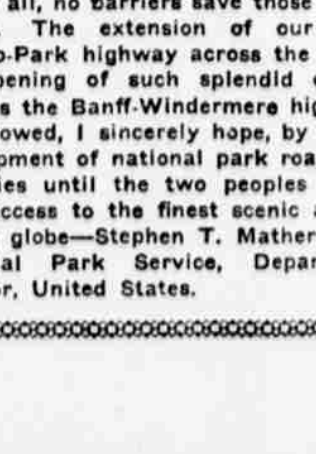

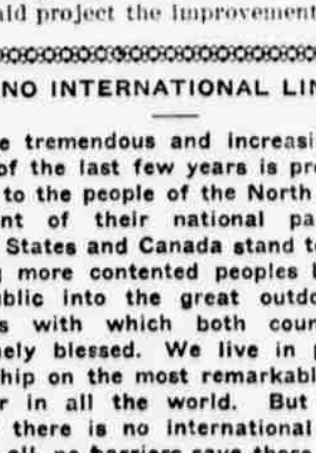

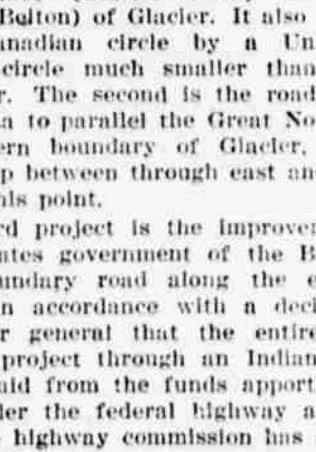

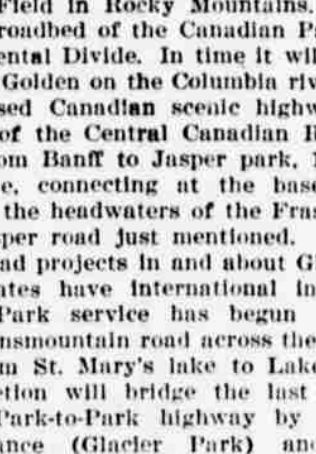

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

COMPLETION of the Banff-Windermere motor highway across the central Canadian Rockies sharply emphasizes the fact that the national parks movement is just about the latest non-political issue of the times in Canada as well as in the United States. An increasingly international aspect is its latest development. On both sides of the most remarkable frontier in the world it is agreed that national parks are national in name; that natural scenic beauty is international; that there are no barriers between parks save those placed by nature; that larger development of roads should give the people of the North American continent easy access to the most splendid recreation region of the globe.

It is a credible prediction that the near future will see a system of national parks from Mount McKinley in Alaska to Grand Canyon in Arizona under a working international agreement that will make it "a unique continental exposition of inestimable value to science and to the popular education of future generations," as well as a vast scenic playground for the people.

The immediate effect of the opening of the 104-mile, two-way Banff-Windermere highway, making passage by automobile possible through the central Canadian Rockies, is that it completes a 500-mile circuit of Rocky Mountains, Yoho, Kootenay and Waterton Lakes National Parks in Canada and connects this circuit with the National Park-to-Park highway in the United States—a gigantic motor way that circles 6,000 miles through nine scenic western states and touches Mount Rainier, Crater Lake, Lassen Volcanic, Yosemite, General Grant, Sequoia, Grand Canyon, Zion, Mesa Verde, Rocky Mountain, Yellowstone and Glacier National parks.

The Canadians call the highway from Banff to Lake Windermere and on to the international line at Kingsgate the Banff-California Bee-Line highway because it keeps right on across a corner of Idaho to Spokane and Portland and thence south to San Francisco and Los Angeles, a distance of 7,531 miles. They call the other half of the "Grand Circle tour" the Banff-Grand Canyon road; this crosses the international line at Peskan, Mont., just to the east of Waterton Lakes and Glacier National parks. The formal opening of the Banff-Windermere highway this summer at the point where it crosses the Kootenay river was an international affair of considerable pomp and ceremony. Old Glory was much in evidence. The band played the national airs. A notable assemblage was in attendance. Dr. King, Dominion Minister of public works, welcomed the guests. J. Ross Eakin, superintendent of Glacier National park, was the official representative of Secretary Hubert Work of the United States Department of the Interior. The speech-making emphasized the international importance of the occasion. Then the Lieutenant governors of Alberta and British Columbia, Dr. R. G. Brett and Walter C. Nichol, cut the red, white and blue ribbon across the road and automobiles started east and west amid cheers.

NO INTERNATIONAL LINE

The tremendous and increasing tourist travel of the last few years is proof of the appeal to the people of the North American continent of their national parks. The United States and Canada stand together in making more contented peoples by getting the public into the great outdoor scenic exhibits with which both countries are supremely blessed. We live in peace and friendship on the most remarkable political frontier in all the world. But in scenic beauty there is no international boundary line at all, no barriers save those placed by nature. The extension of our National Park-to-Park highway across the border by the opening of such splendid connecting links as the Banff-Windermere highway will be followed, I sincerely hope, by the larger development of national park roads in both countries until the two peoples are given easy access to the finest scenic attractions of the globe.—Stephen T. Mather, Director, National Park Service, Department of Interior, United States.

through the Blackfoot Indian reservation. The National Parks of North America! That is the new international conception of two systems that are essentially one in that they represent geologically and biologically a continent rather than two countries. Determined and persistent attempts at commercial invasion of the national parks of both countries have, largely brought about this international movement. The American Association for the Advancement of Science, the largest scientific organization in the world, with 12,000 members in the United States and Canada, spoke for both countries when it recently passed a resolution setting forth the perils of the situation.

Mrs. A. Van Arnam

Davenport, Iowa.—"I wish I could tell to all the world how much I owe to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I was nearing middle life when my last child came and my health was miserable. I had continuous pain in my right side. I took nine bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and can truly say that I suffered the least that time and my health afterwards was better than it had ever been before. While passing through the critical time of life I depended solely upon 'Favorite Prescription' to keep me well and strong and it did not fail me. I had none of the distressing symptoms most women have at this period, such as heat flashes and dizzy spells. I came through in excellent health and am still just as strong and well as I was thirty years ago, thanks to this best of medicines, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription."—Mrs. Alice Van Arnam, 1705 W.
