F. M. BROOME, Chairman.

Democratic County Convention.

The democrats in the various precincts of Box Butte County, Nebraska, are requested to select delegates to attend a county convention to be held at the court house in Hemingford, Nebraska, on October 7, 1895, at 1 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of nominating candidates for county officers to be elected at the coming November election, to wit:

Co. Judge, Sheriff, Clerk, Treasurer, Superintendent of Schools and one Commissioner for the third district.

The several precincts are entitled to representation in said convention, as follows: Alliance - 21 Liberty - 3 Boyd - 2 Nonpareil - 5 Box Butte - 5 Runningwater - 5 Dorsey - 12 Lake - 5 Lawn - 7 Snake - 3 Wright - 4 Total - 71

The Committeemen in the various precincts will attend to calling caucuses in their respective precincts at such time and place as may in their judgment seem best.

It will also be the duty of this convention to select a county central committee and a chairman thereof for the ensuing year.

S. M. SAYSER, Chairman.

The liverymen of Clarks are having a rate war. One of them offered to take a traveling man fifteen miles to Fullerton free, but lost the job because his competitor carried the passenger free and paid his hotel bill besides.

A business man said on the street here a few days ago: "What we need is to shut the mouths of these devilish politicians who are continually going around stirring up strife and contention." That is a fact. The greatest service some of these selfish politicians could do their country would be to die and let the wheels of commercial and material progress roll on.—Monroe Enquirer.

APPENDICITIS has got to be so formidable a disease, and the cause of it so often attributed to grape seeds and other foreign bodies, that many have feared to eat these wholesome fruits. In a paper read before the Virginia Medical Association, Dr. Hunter McGuire, a celebrated surgeon of that state said that in all the operations he had performed for appendicitis he had never seen a single grape, tomato, or cherry seed, and he added that he was glad to make the statement since it might tend to allay the fears of the supposed dangers arising from eating these fruits.

Issuing Paper Against Silver.

The iron industry is recovering from the hard times at a rapid rate. Every sheet and plate mill in the country is now in operation to the fullest capacity, and the orders already received are sufficient to keep them running steadily for several months. This means that all kinds of business are improving, and that the old-time prosperity is not far distant.

One of the theories of the free silver advocate is that the government can buy silver at about 60 cents an ounce, and issue paper money—(generally called silver certificates)—against it on a basis of 16 to 1 of gold; which would make $1.00 of the silver certificate represent less than 60 cents worth of silver held against it for redemption. In other words, if the government should buy say $55 worth of silver, it would be required to issue and put in circulation $100 in silver certificates. (The exact cost of the silver would depend on the market price at the time of purchase.) The $55 worth of silver would be coined into one hundred silver dollars, and any holder of the certificates would be entitled to exchange them for the coined silver. This was in part the principle of the Sherman law.

But as the writer has elsewhere clearly shown the mere stamp of the government on paper gives it no value, unless there be a promise of full payment.

Now these silver certificates put out under the Sherman law were made payable in silver dollars, and as silver declined, and these silver dollars declined in intrinsic marketable value till they were worth little more than fifty cents each, the silver certificates would have been worth just the same but for the fact that it was the policy of the government, regardless of the law, to keep all of its money on a parity. It was its policy to make its promise, as was originally intended fully good—to make all of its dollars redeemable in 100 cents good money; therefore, the government accepted the silver certificates and silver dollars as well, for all dues, made them interchangeable with and practically redeemable in gold. Otherwise we should have had moneys of varying values. The silver and silver certificates have been worth 55 or 60 cents, varying with the market value of silver, and other money actually based on gold would have been worth 100 cents.

So it may be seen that paper money cannot be issued against silver at a ratio of 16 to 1, and be full face value money, unless it be interchangeable with gold. And as elsewhere clearly shown, the gold reserve is not strong enough to carry any increased volume of money.

Moreover the government has directly lost an incredible sum making such experiment. Since 1873, it has bought for monetary purposes silver costing five hundred and nine million dollars. (See report 1894, Bureau of the Mint.) The shrinkage in value from the average cost of $1.00 per fine ounce has been enormous.

These experiments were forced on the government as "compromises" by advocates of free silver coinage.

The New York Times, in a series of carefully prepared articles, based on actual statistics, lately showed that the losses to the government on flat paper money and silver, have cost it more than five thousand millions of dollars. This estimate is far within the true loss.

The financial policy of the United States, dictated for 20 years by the mining camps of the West, would have beggared, and bankrupted both the government and the people, if the country had not been new, and the most resourceful on earth.

Theorizing is well enough for dreamers, but in matters of business, common sense and well known principles are the only safe guides.

Free silver politicians who want votes, and Western mine owners who want other peoples' money at any cost, to the other people, have a theory never tried under like conditions in any country in the world, and they would commit us to that theory in complete disregard of consequences.—Dollars or What.

Notice.

To you delinquent tax-payers: I wish to say that we are still paying 100 cents on the dollar for all of the 50 ct silver dollars that you may bring in, to apply on you taxes, and will also throw in one of Coxeys non-interest Bond magazines which is interesting reading for all parties. We have about 50 copies left, one copy of which will be given with each receipt while they last. Come early and avoid the rush, and be made happy with the thought that you have been able to pay your taxes once more with silver as money. Co. Treasurer.
