Local Goldbug Republicans take on That "Worried Look."

As They View the Vast Throng Determined to Vote for Honest Principles.

A BIG DAY FOR BRYAN.

The whole north side of the capitol grounds was filled with people Tuesday afternoon to witness the preliminary notification exercises of William Jennings Bryan as the presidential nominee of the silver party. They stood for three hours with the sun pouring down upon them that they might hear the next president speak upon the all-important question of the campaign.

Mr. Bryan came upon the platform escorted by Mr. Norris Humphrey, followed by Mrs. Bryan and Mr. George A. Groot of Cleveland, O.

Mr. E. E. Brown introduced Mr. Bryan. The audience fairly went wild as their fellow townsman and future president arose to speak. The deafening cheers lasted for several minutes. After the crowd had yelled itself hoarse and about exhausted its lung capacity, Mr. Bryan was given an opportunity to speak. His voice was hoarse at first, but became stronger as he spoke. He could be heard distinctly to the very edge of the vast throng.

Mr. Bryan said he would not talk long as there were others present who could present the issues fully as well as he, and he was trying to save himself as much as possible. He referred particularly to the growth of the silver movement, and said: "The sentiment in favor of free coinage is a growing sentiment. It far surpasses my expectations in the east. They are going to be with you in your fight to free the country from the financial influence that has so long dominated it. The same conditions exist in the east as in the west. The intense earnestness that characterize the campaign is remarkable. People are earnestly for us are they are earnestly against us. There is no lukewarmness about anybody."

"We have a financial system that is injurious to the great mass of our people. Our republican friends admit that it is not good for us, but they insist that we must keep it until foreign nations come to our aid."

"The democratic platform declares for the immediate restoration of the money of the constitution. The republicans are trying to drag in other questions but there can be no questions until we first decide whether we can legislate for ourselves or not."

The big corporations are attempting to coerce and compel their employees to vote in accordance with their instructions. They assert the right to determine how those in their employ shall work. This is another great problem that forces itself in this campaign. If corporations can do this in one instance they can do so in all. The people create these corporations. Did they intend that they should exercise such power? If corporations have no legal right to make such demands upon their employees, they usurp the power and become a dangerous power and menace to our free institutions.

"They say we will have a flood of silver and the gold will go out. It would be better to have the silver come in and drive the gold out than have foreign financiers come in and take the gold out and leave nothing in return. They want good money. So do we. They want a money so good, so dear, that the poor man can't get any of it."

(Space will not permit us to produce the whole speech.) The parade did not form until nearly 3 o'clock. It started from in front of the Lincoln hotel. The first division was headed by Fred A. Miller, marshal of the day and his staff. He was followed by the Nebraska state band. Then came the Bryan home guards 200 strong with S. S. Whiting and staff. Following this was the Bryan carriage in which were Mr. and Mrs. Bryan, Chairman Groot of the notification committee. These were followed by other members of the notification and reception committee.

Several of our citizens attended the Jennings speaking at Alliance Wednesday night. Notwithstanding the rain, every seat in the opera house was occupied. Rev. Jennings spoke the truth and we are informed that twenty eight persons were converted to the silver cause.

Dunlap cheese was awarded the first premium and silver medal at the state fair competing with cheese from the whole U. S. There were about fifty different kinds and makes of cheese from all over the country and cheese had to be very nice in order to secure first prize and also to get the silver medal. This not only speaks well for the cheese factory but for northwest Nebraska and everybody should feel proud of it.

Ex-Senator S. S. Alley, of Wilber, arrived in town yesterday morning and will remain a couple of days attending to business matters. Mr. Alley is one of the most prominent politicians in the state and until a few months ago was termed a "sound money" democrat but he now supporting Hon. W. J. Herman says he has always voted the republican ticket but this year he will set party lines aside and vote for W. J. Bryan.

Wehn, arrived in Alliance yesterday morning from St. Paul, Minn., where they were in attendance at the G. A. R. encampment.
