SHERIDAN'S HAND.

SPRUNG TWO ACES OF DIAMONDS ON CONKLING IN A JACK POT.

Very Much Embarrased When His Attention Was Called to the Error - The Little General Wanted the Story Kept Quiet, but It Was Too Good.

"I was in a poker game," writes a correspondent of the Washington Star, "in the winter of 1879, when Senator Conkling and General Phil Sheridan were players. It was a four handed game, and John Chamberlin was the other player. This game at Chamberlin's was always for a $5 limit at first, with the understanding that along toward morning, after a coupla of hours of warming up, anybody could suggest the removal of the limit if he wanted to. The way Conkling and Sheridan bluffed each other that night was a caution. Both men seemed to strike out luck altogether as an element in their good natured play against each other, and as both of them caught fine hands occasionally when engaged in this tug of war of bluffing neither of them could get an exact line on the other, and it was better than a play to study their faces at the show downs. Conkling was having all the success during the latter part of the night, and it was fun to hear Little Phil softly utter dark and woolly things under his breath when, time after time, Conkling would show a band consisting of nothing at all after having scared Sheridan out or produce a gorgeous set of fours or a full hand at such times as Sheridan, deciding that the senator was bluffing, would call him.

"'Bite him, Sheridan,' Chamberlin would say amusedly on these occasions, and Sheridan would tell Chamberlin to go to the diekens and call for another deck of cards.

"We started the last round of jack pots with a new deck. Sheridan dealt the first mess himself, and after it had gone around and none of the three of us could open it Sheridan opened it himself. Neither Chamberlin nor I had any right to stay on our hands, so it was left between Sheridan and Conkling, who staid. Conkling took three cards and turned his little pair into threes. Sheridan dished himself out three cards and bit his cigar hard when he saw his hand. He made a $5 bet to draw Conkling out, and the senator raised him $25. It passed between them with these $25 bets until there was nearly $300 in the pot, both men serntinizing each other pretty carefully at each bet.

"'I don't know so much about you this time,' said Conkling finally, 'and I think I'll just call you for safety."

"Both laid their hands down at the Record. same time. Coukling had three nines, and he locked at Sheridan strangely when he saw the color of Sheridan's three cces. Both Chamberlin and myself also saw what was wrong at the same instant, but we only smiled and let the two men have it out. Sheridan

HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Her Attitude Made Him Question the Joks Blanufacturers' Veracity.

"Some time," said the young man, "when business is light I am going to take a day off, and whom I do some of the comic papers will do well to engage a large assortment of guards."

"Going to turn in some corpie verse, are you?" inquired the older man facetionsly.

"No, I'm not," answered the young man, with emphasis, "but I'll bet when get through with them they will now a few things about their business that they never knew before."

"Oh, they've been having fun with you, have they?" exclaimed the older man. "But you mustn't mind that. It's all in good nature, you know."

"They haven't mentioned me," as serted the young man, "but they have led me astray by a long series of inane jests, and I intend to show them the error of their ways. I suppose you know that I've been married just about a year?"

"Yes, I heard of your wedding."

"Well, just about two months after we were married my wife informed me one morning that her mother was coming to visit us. I immediately thought of the comic papers. Before she became my mother-in-law I rather liked the old lady, but of course things were different after the wedding. Consequently I stamped around and swore a bit and declared that I wanted it understood that no relative to either party to the contract could step in there and run that house. Then my wife came back at me with the statement that if her mother wasn't welcome we might as well come to an understanding at once and arrange for a separation. I replied that she was welcome so long as she was willing to mind her own business, but that it was a well known fact that no mother-inlaw ever had succeeded in doing that yet. Naturally the result was that when her mother arrived my wife and I were not on the best of terms, and it didn't take long for the old lady to see it.

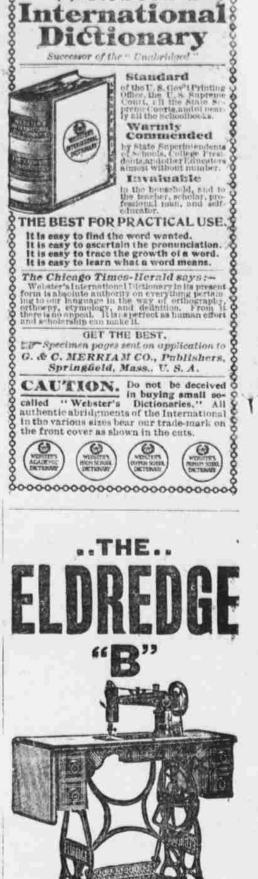

When she did see it, she acted." "Roasted you, I suppose?" said the older man.

"Roasted me, nothing !" returned the oung man. "She reasted her daughter. I happened to overhear it, and when she laid down the law as to the duties of a wife my heart went out to her, and J felt meaner than a bobtail flush for all I d said of her. And she's been the same ever since. She doesn't mix in much if any when there's a 'tiff,' but I can easily see that she takes my end of it when I'm not there. And good natured ! Say! She's the best natured woman you ever heard of. Talk about mothers-in-law !] wish yon'd point out one of these humorous writers to me for a minute. I'm feeling pretty strong today."-Chicage

Purists and Pedants.

Many purists condemn such a phrase as "no sort or kind" on the ground of tautology. I should be sorry, however, to see it disappear, because it is a landmark in English philology. It is a relic of the fusion of Saxon and Norman-French. At that period many phrases of a bilingual character crept into use, and this is one of them. "'Truth and honor' is another, truth being "troth," or honor, as in "by my troth." "Voice" as a verb is much objected to, coming to us moderns as it does from American sources-e.g., to "voice" the public sentiment. I don't like it and never had a broad grin on his face and was just about to rake in the pot. Conkling was gazing at the little man of iron with a puzzled look in his eyes.

Every day we hear of prople residing in Alliance and vicinity "say that they will support Hemingford for county seat; that their taxes . re enough now and if the county seat was removed they would have to bear their share of the expense of a magnificent court house which the highflying deadbeats of that ^Taristocratic village are trying to shoulder on the taxpayers.

It will be a task for the republican machine to find enough men who will allow their names to be placed on the state ticket because they are sure to be slaughtered. However it is possible that they can make up a licket with notoriety seekers. It will also be difficult to hold a convention without Joe Bartley but Joe will have his say anyhow. Doubtless he is the most influenial republican in the state today and his friends outside will do his bidding.

""'Oh, i say, there, Phil, just wait a minute, ' said be. 'Do you really think that pot belongs to you?' "'Belongs to me?' said Sheridan. Well, it does if the nose on my face belongs to me.' And again he reached over to hee in the pot.

"Conkling ran his hand through his hair and again stopped Sheridan with a gesture.

"'1 don't remember ever having seen that sort of thing before,' he said. 'Did you, Phil?'

" 'See what sort of thing before?' said Sheridan. 'What in blazes are you talking about, Conkling?'

"For reply Conkling put one finger upon one of Sheridan's aces and then pointed to another one of the aces.

"'I never saw a jack pot won with three aces, two of which happened to be aces of diamonds,' said Conkling, smiling.

"Sheridan looked at his hand, lying face up on the table before him, and his face became fiery red. The consternation on his countenance was really funny

"'Why,' said he after a minute, 'blamed if I don't believe I'm nothing better than an involuntary swindler. That other ace, you see, is a club. I opened the pot on a pair of red aces, and they were, of course, these aces of diamonds. Chamberlin, 'turning to the amused boniface, 'turn me out of doors as a fraud and a short card player, will you?

"'And have the army fire a volley over the ruins of my house?' replied Chamberlin. 'Hardly. Anyhow, I'd rather see you and Conkling engage in a rough and tumble fight over the thing. Go ahead, the pair of you. We'll see fair play, ' turning to me.

"Of course the extra ace of diamonds had slipped into the deck accidentally before it left the manufacturer's hands, but Sheridan, when he had in a measure recovered from his surprise of the revelation, made a humorous pretension that he had known the whole thing all along and convulsed the three of us by feelingly appealing to Conkling to refrain from exposing him to the world for the sake of his family and all that sort of thing. The hand being foul, the pot was of course divided."

use it, but it occurs in Shakespeare. Notoriously many so called Americanisms are old English provincialisms. The purists threaten, indeed, to become insufferable pedants. It is now the custom of the printer's reader-our great authority-to treat "none" as invariably singular, a contraction for no one. But it is useful as a plural and is so used in Shakespeare-e. g., "Speak daggers, but use none." Why may we not continue to say, "I spoke to no women at the meeting because there were none present?"'-Academy.

The Middle Aged Man.

"I wonder," said the middle aged man," why we take life so hard. At the very best we have only 75 or 100 years of it, and yet we fume and fuss and worry all through it. I think of it sometimes. Here I am-well, say, 50, with maybe 20 years ahead. The cold chances are against my getting so many, but take a bopeful view and say I've got 20. But that's a mighty short time, heh? But just think of frittering away that time in worry!

"When I think of these things, I make up my mind that, by cracky, I will not worry any more, and, oh, I think I take things more philosophically than I used to! But let some little thing come up! I don't fly all to pieces over it maybe, but it drags and grinds. And only 20 years to live!

"What a waste of time! What poor, miserable critters we are!"-New York Sun.

The Supreme Court.

Justice Brewer has noted some curions coincidences in regard to the members of the supreme court. The judges are seated on the bench on either side of the chief justice in the order of the date of their appointments, the senior at the right, the second at the left, and so on. Before the retirement of Justice Field on the right of the chief justice were seated the three colors, Justices Gray, Brown and White. None of the associates who sat on the right of the chief justice had children. Every associate who sat on the left had a large family, and all but Judge Peckham had grandchildren.-New York Tribune.
