The Strange Case of Mary Page

By Frederick Lewis, Author of "What Happened to Mary" Pictures by Essanay

(Copyright, 1915, by McClure Publications.) CHAPTER 2. (Continued from Yesterday.) But the paralysis that bound her snapped like an over-taut wire when she saw Pollock's hand slipping back to his hip pocket. Now she matched savagery with savagery. When in answer to her cry of warning, Langdon struck up the treacherous hand and sent the revolver spinning to the floor, it was she who sprang forward and snatched it out of reach of the groping fingers of the fighters.

FIRST NATIONAL SELLS BUILDING

A. E. Cook of Chicago Buys Structure as Investment—Leases It Back.

TO USE IT FOR ABOUT A YEAR

For $200,000 the First National bank building, southeast corner of Thirtieth and Farnam streets, has been sold to Albert E. Cook, a wealthy real estate owner of Chicago. He buys as an investment, says President F. H. Davis of the bank. The latter adds that all the bank fixtures, vaults and safes are included in the transfer, and that Mr. Cook may contemplate using the banking room for some similar institution, when the First National vacates to occupy its own new building at Sixteenth and Farnam streets.

Lease Room Back.

The big sale was closed Wednesday, when title and possession passed to Mr. Cook after extensive negotiations. It was made subject to all existing leases. The First National bank and affiliated institutions immediately rented their present quarters from Mr. Cook, until December 1, and will remain there until the new building is completed, which they expect to be about November 1.

START TO SINK CAISSON HOLES FOR BANK BUILDING

Work on the caisson foundations for the new First National bank building, Sixteenth and Farnam streets, is now under way. The first caisson hole was started Tuesday, and Manager Nagel, local representative of the architects, says he will soon be able to judge how deep the caissons will have to be sunk. A total of thirty-seven are required to give the fourteen-story building a solid foundation. It is almost five feet to rock, but if satisfactory ground is found at a lesser depth the caissons will not be put down that deep, he says.

BIG MONEY MADE ON STATE POTATOES

Omaha Dealers Put Away Large Consignments, Which Now Are Selling High.

QUARTER OF A MILLION BUSHELS

Omaha commission men who bought and stored potatoes last fall have each made a large piece of money by reason of their operations, for the price has soared until the spuds sell for $1.15 on track and in large quantities. It is expected that prices will go higher, for it is known that all through the central section of the country the supply is short and that Omaha is one of the few points where they are in storage in quantities.

Last fall, on track, up through the sandhill section of the state, where potato raising is big industry, the crop was enormous. Omaha buyers took immense quantities of these potatoes at 25 cents per bushel on track at the loading stations. The freight charges into Omaha and the handling here averaged about 11 cents per bushel. The carrying charges up to the present time, it is asserted, has been about 10 cents, making the total cost in the neighborhood of 36 cents per bushel.

It is asserted that last fall something like 200,000 bushels of potatoes went into cold storage in Omaha and that most of them have been held until now, when the price has gone considerably past $1 per bushel. Old potatoes will continue to be in prime favor for at least sixty days more and until the new crop commences to come in from Texas and Florida. Even after new potatoes start from the south the old potatoes will have the call for several weeks, consumers generally regarding them superior in quality, besides, even at the high prices that the old spuds will fetch, they will be cheaper.
