Much of Optimism Recently Elevating Prices is Lacking During Session.

TRADING MORE CONTRACTED

NEW FORK. Feb. 3.—Much of the optimism which effected a general elevation of prices yearday was tacking today, the speculative community again falling back upon the Lushtania affair and is possible results as an excine for depressing the list. There was also some discussion regarding evernight advices from London which pointed to another shuffling of the political cards in the British empire.

Trading was lighter and more contracted than at siny recent session and utterfy without public interest or suspert. The meager overturn was limited more than ordinarily to the professional element, which was plainly inclined toward the selling side. Comparative strength and scilvily was manifested by several of the independent steel issues, notably Colorado Fuel, Great Northern Ore, Republic Iron and Sloss-Shefrield Size, giving rise to fresh rumors of deals or compilinations in which Midvale Sleel figured. United States Sten was under internitient pressure, regardless of favorable tostemate dealing with the corporation Sanuary earnings and untilled tomage.

Initial dealings indicated general fromens, which soon gave way to pronounced irregularity in the more active issues compilaing the munitions and oil groups and such rafts se Canadian Pacific and Baittmore & Chin. Lusses were largely retrieved before midday, but for the balance of the session the market drifted dity, with an almost imperceptible duwnward-trend.

Total sales amounted to 46,000 shares, to which United States Sizel, Cruelbie

The prosecutor laughed. You'd look sick yourself in his shoes," he said. "Danjels has lost a popular star, a bully good show and a generous backer through one little tnirty-eight his hands on has flown the coop. He doesn't know anything. I've numped him dry as powder. A discreet knock sounded and the bailiff put his head in at the door, "His honor is ready to go into court, eir," he said; and with a nod of relief the prosecutor gathered up his papers. "Defense begins today, don't ft?" asked the detective as he left. "What do you mens it's going to be?"

"I'm not guessing anything," said the district attorney grimly, "except that his witnesses are going to have a bad time when they get into my hands." "Tell me something I don't know!" chuckled the detective with honest admiration, though after a moment's pause he added behind his superior's back.

And also of reducing life-and-death issues to mere "good copy," for those who could over the next day with avid eagerness.

There was an extra briskness about the newspaper group today, however, and the prosecutor noticed two or three new faces, "relay men" to take the place caliber cartridge and the fortune he had of others who would turn their s ories in by telephone hour after hour for the special editions. For today the defense of Mary Page would begin. Today Langden must strip off the mask of a smiling confidence and show what lay behind it. The mask, or at any rate the smile. was still there when he came into court, not with Mary, this time, but with her mother. His hand was tucked protectingly under the arm of the little grayhaired woman, and his lips were close to her ear as if he were murmuring a final encouragement or a final instruction. Mary, too, was smiling, and she had as palely sweet as she herself, and her

And not even in her own heart would she let herself contemplate the thorny path that must be traveled before that elusive freedom had struck the invisible gyves from off her wrists and heart. She was still wincing a little from the lash of the fiml speech of the proseculor. It seemed to her as if nothing to comeexcept the final moments before the verdict-could possibly be as bad as that half hour of the day before: So it was with equanimity; though a yearning wis fulness showed in her eyes, that she heard the first witness of the day called.
