UNDERTONE IS CONFIDENT

NEW YORK, Feb., 18.—Gradual but general recoveries from low levels of the early week were in today's dealings. Trading was dull and subject to minor reversals during the forencon, but the andertone was more confident and stable. Less attention was paid to international affairs and more consideration was given to such potent factors as expellent rallway and industrial carnings. Continuance of the current high prossure of activity and expansion in seneral trade was again reflected in the heavy bank clearings.

Coppers and other metal shares featured the operations to an unusual degree, but Superior and American sinc was especially prominent at new high records. Zines maximum of Sig. was accompanied by considerable activity, making that issue the leader, Anaconda, Utah and Chino, also registered gams of a point or more.

Contrary to their usual course war issues were mainly irregular, but came forward in the later dealings. The automobile group was under intermittent pressure, likewise petroleums, American woolen and some other obscure specialties, but Sugara, United Fruit, Mercantile Marines and American Tobacco proved more than an offset.

Mary Page The Strange Case of

By Frederick Lewis, Author of "What Happened to Mary"

Pictures by Essanay

SYNOPSIS. Mary Page, actress, is accussed of the murder of David Pollock and is defended by her lover. Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print he saw on Mary's shoulder. Further evidence shows that norror of drink produces temporary insanity in Mary. The defense in "ropressed psychosis."

CHAPTER V. Her Father's Death. (Continued from Yesterday.)

If she hadn't-she shuddered and caught her breath in a smothered sob, and for a moment the courtroom hung in a hase before her and the voice of MacPherson speaking on the witnessstand receded to a vast distance and seemed to be again the murmuring coices of that angry mob. But she fought back the impending faintness and the rising tears, and as one bracing himself against the impast of some great weight, she straightened her slender shoulders to meet without flinching the story of that morning's tragedy. When Mr. Langdon and I drove cop," MacPherson was saying, "the men were still there, and Mr. Langdon stood oop in the sleigh and made a speech to them urging them to go bome quietly. 'Miss Page is safe in the hands of a good dochad matter worse if you attempt to carry community, but if you drive him out this have been making some tests, you know. way it's going to mean disgrace to the town and to Mary Page, too. Do you has done it-Drivin' her and-the brute! And the crowd began to murmur again. one of the men gave a cry and pointit op, and there in the cupota stood Dan Page-wild like the daft, clingla' to the once. rail, and he cried oot, 'What he says is much as you men love yours It's doctor." whisky that hurt them-not me. I've to The tried-to keep away from it-but it gets me. The sight of it-the smell of itthe taste of it-is ever in my mind. I trink because I must, and drink more to drown the memory of it! I've lived in hell for years, and no horsewhipping could punish me-as does the knowledge of this night's work.' Then suddenly he burst out cryin'-sobbin' like a child, while the men stood starin' cop at him. Then he flung out his arm and said, Philip-take care of them-be careful of Pollock-I'm going to take myself out of the community-now..' And at that he leapit up onto the rail and jumped.

MacPherson broke off abruptly, and his hand shook as he wiped the drops of sweat off his forehead-and the shudder that gripped him swept through the entire room at the thought of that body hurtling through the air down upon the snow to stain it with that swiftly flowing stream of crimson. Only Mrs. Page sat. erect and unmoved, but her eyes were pools of an agony too deep for expres-

"Was Mr. Page killed instantly?" "Yes, he was dead when we picklt him oop, and the men spread their coats over him and carried him to the hoose," "Did you go into the house with them?"

"No," said MacPherson, "as well ye know, sir, I tookit you back to the doctor's hoose Langdon smiled a little. "It's not what know, but what I want you to tell the ourt, Mr. MacPherson; so will you please tell them, as succintly as possible, what occurred upon your return to the residence of Dr. Jamison?

"It were the gude wife of the doctor that met us, and toldit us that the doctor had Miss Page in the laboratory making some tests about the brain. At that Mr. Langdon went very white and said, 'do you mean,- then stoppit and said queerly, 'We will wait' It wasna long before the doctor came in, and Mr. Langor, he said, and you will only make a don toldit him of Mr. Page and of his death, and said, 'Can Mary know?out this plan of whipping Dan Page out and the doctor said slowly. Yes—she may of town. I'll see to it that he leaves the be told—it will lift at least one fear. I

"Mr. Langdon put oot his hand as if to say something, then stoppit, for Miss suppose she could bear the thought of Page hersel' came in, her head bandher father's having been publicly aged, but looking verra sweet and bon-whipped?" 'Well,' shouted one of the nie. When she saw Langdon, she said, "'tis not beatin' here the way he Philip-Philip.' And he tuke her in his arms and kissed her. Then the doctor put his hand on her shoulder and said, Then Mr. Langdon told them that the 'Miss Page, Mr. Langdon has bad news drink was like a ragin' beast inside of of your father. Are you brave enough Mr. Page, that he knew nought of what to hear it? And she clung to Mr. Langhe did; that he probably didn't remember don and said, 'Yes,' Then he told her anything-that he really leved his wife that her father had been killed in an and his girl. And while he was talkin' accident, and she burst into tears and cried over and over, 'Poor father-oh, poor father-I must go to mother at

"Then a nurse came and tookit her God's truth. I love my wife and girl as oot again, leavin' us alone with the

"The doctor had already said that he been a slave in the grip of a fiend all had been making some special tests for I've tried-my God, men. I've the brain." Langdon's voice rasped sharply through the room. "Did he make the results of those tests known in your

"He did." "What were they? "He said, the is sane now, and these tears will relieve her, but I would advise you to have Dr. Foster, the alieniat, make an examination. She has still much to suffer, and-this thing will come back! You'll have to take good care of her and guard her, Philip."

Scar-city of materials is a more notice—able feature and in the west and south, as in the east, it is much expert to find suyers than to obtain merchaudies, Prequent complaints are still heard of tardy deliveries but moderate progress is made in relieving the traffic competition and there was a fifty per cent reduction in the number of idle freight reduction i

-Today we come knocking at your doors again with urgent word of the greatest of all bargains the King-Peck sale brings you. The sales have already been tremendous, making a new chapter in Omaha commercial history, but there are still as great opportunities of savings as existed in the first place. New sections of the stock are being placed on sale every week, and as lines become depleted in other portions, regrouping and repricing are constantly stimulating interest in the greatest sale of men's wear ever known to Omaha.
