JUDGE ENGLISH IS LAID TO REST

Over Seven Hundred Omahans Attend Funeral Services for Departed Jurist at St. Peter's.

SCORES OF PRIESTS TAKE PART

That all Omaha is in mourning over the death of District Judge James P. English was signified at the funeral of the distinguished jurist at St. Peter's church, Twentyeighth and Leavenworth streets, yesterday, during which time no courts were in session.

Many judges, attorneys, representative business and professional men joined with hundreds of friends and acquaintances in paying their last public respects to the memory of Jidge English. The large church was crowded to the doors and many women and men stood up during the entire service, and many score followed the body to Holy Sepulcher cometery, where it was placed in a receiving vault.

Hold Solemn High Mass.

AWarning by an ex-tenderfoot

Alittle learning is a dangerous thing

When the New Yorker bought Hiram's farm, he rejected Hiram's methods. He had theories of his own.

He got rid of the cows; pruned the orchard too heavily; threw the farm all out of balance.

"The trouble with me," he says, "was that I knew too much and not enough.'

He has had four costly, nerve-racking years. But at last he is winning. He knows now that his neighbors were practical, and that he let his theories run away with him.

His case is not unusual. His story is a warning. He tells it well-Tenderfoot Farming-today, in
