RESOLUTION GOES TO TABLE

Ballot Taken After Day of Debate and Roll Call Shows 276 for and 143 Against.

FLOOD LEADS WILSON FORCES

WASHINGTON, March 7 .- The house tonight by a vote of 276 to 143 tabled the McLemore resolution to warn Americans off armed merchant ships of European belligerents.

Representative Flood of Virginia at 5:46 o'clock had taken the floor to close the debate for the adminis-

At the close of his address at 6:06 o'clock, Representative Flood moved to lay the McLemore warning resolution on the table.

Representative Cooper of Wisconsin moved the ayes and nays, and the roll call was begun on the final vote, nays, 143.

Pou Attacks Resolution. Mr. Pou attacked the McLemore resolution at the outset of the debate. "It means in effect, that if an American disregards a warning that the United States government will fold its hands," "Is there a single red-blooded citizen in this house or this country who wants to do that? It is charged the president wants war. All the imps of hell never devised a more infamous charge Jo man since Abraham Lincoln has gone brough such at test as the president has gone through in the last six months. He tried to preserve peace. He would not sacrifice a single life to make hinself president for a lifetime. He has support on both sides of this chamber, He has support on the democratic side and distinguished support on the other side. Only the other day I read a statement of former President Taft supporting Applause on ooth sides of the chamber followed his remarks.

Campbell Suggests Substitute. When Representative Campbell, republican, arose to speak he read a substi-Fite he said he would propose if a motion to end debate on the rule did not carry. It follows:

Substitute is Read. "Resolved, That in the opinion of the house of representatives citizens of the United States under existing conditions and irrespective of their legal rights ought to refrain from taking passage on armed vessels of beligerent nations, ex-cept in the case of imperative necessity."

"There is no great question of national rights involved in this issue," declared Mr. Campbell, "nor is there any great crisis involving the honor of the United States at this time. Does any one contend that an American citizen has a right to travel on an armed cruiser of a nation at war? "The thing today is to avoid war. The question ought not to have been brought here," he continued. "Now it is here, vote squarely on a resolution warning citizens of the danger they are in when they get on armed ships of a belligerent.' Scattered applause from the democratic ide greeted Representative Gardner, fepublican, who spoke on the parliamentary status of the McLemore resolution.

"If you want to stand with the president and two ex-presidents you will vote to sustain the rule and table the McLe-more resolution," he said.

No Thought of War. "The thought furthest from President

Wilson's mind is a desire for war," de-clared Representative Bennett, republican of New York. He attacked the rule, however, as "cowardly, evasive and treacherous." He complained that the house gave many hours to routine business and would give only four hours to consider a resolution "involving war." Representative Graham of Pennsylvania, republican, declared: "Today I don't want to be pro-Ger-

REAVIS DECLARES HIS POSITION

(From a Staff Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, March 7 .- (Special Telegram.)-The one big upstanding thought that stands out in the several votes taken today, on the previous question, on the rule and on the McLemore resolution itself warning Americans to stay off armed merchantmen ships is that President Wilson "said it," "Said what?,' asks the searcher after knowledge.

That the president said in substance, as charged by Senator Gore of Oklahoma, "that war with Germany at this time might not be undesirable in the interest of the United States and in the course of

The party whip never cracked so loudly nor bit as keenly as today and in many instances livid marks appeared that will take months to heal, if ever, It was the pressure of the administration that brought victory, aided by the seaboard republicans, who, for very obvious reasons voted with the president's forces to-

To Save His Face. The form of the McLemore resolution was not satisfactory and thereby weakened the oposition, but it presented a most remarkable parliamentary situation In that it denied what the president gaked for and at the same time is claimed as a complete vindication by the followers of Mr. Wilson. The "old man said it, but we are going to save his face," that about outlines the situation in explanation of the vote to table the McLemore resolution, 276 for to 143 against, and voting in the negative was the solid dele pation from Nebraska, the solid delegation from Iowa and the solid delegation from Minnesota, as predicted in former dispatches.

The vote on the previous question rather surprised the republicans from Nebraska to find Shallenbevger "aye" with them, while Lobeck and Stephen voted "no," this vote in the final analysis indicating that the administration forces

Reavis Explains Vote. In explaining his vote against tabling the McLemore resolution, Congressman Reavis made a really splendid speech in a day of oratory. He told the house he was compelled to do so, not because he favored the measure, but If the motion to table was defeated it would give him an opportunity to present an amendment, the substance of which was: "That in the opinion of the house of representatives, citizens of the United States, under existing conditions and irrespective of their legal rights, ought to refrain from taking passage on armed vessels of belligerent nations, except in case of imperative necessity, and the consideration of the resolution and amendments thereto shall proceed under the five-minute rule to a final vote on

The for candidates for president, vice president, United States senator, governor, members of congress, memshors of the state legislature and for the various hospitals were momen-tarily expected to die.

Thomas B. Marshall also has an opponent in the primary. Charles W. Fairbanks, former vice president of the United States, is the only person seeking the republican nomination for president in this state. There is no candidate for the republican nomination for vice president on the ballot. The primary law provides that the choice of the voters in the primary shall be supported in the national convention so long as their names remain before those bodies.

The three republican candidates for senator are: Harry S. New, for many years national committeeman for Indiana; James E. Watson, former member of congress, and Arthur R. Robinson, a state senator. For governor, James P. Goodrich, present national committeeman; Warren T. McCray, a farmer, and Judge Quincy A. Myers, formerly of the state supreme court, are seeking the

On the democratic side the name of Senator John W. Kern was the only one placed on the ballot for the nomination for United States senator. For the subernatorial nomination of that party John A. M. Hanly Moose Candidate. On the progressive ballot, James B. Wilson is unopposed for the nomination for United States senator, and J. Frank Hanly has no opposition for the nomina tion for the office of governor, to which he was once elected as a republican. The Indiana progressives did not put forward candidates for the nominations for president and vice president. Because of the length of the ballots and also because of the fact that the voters may indicate their second choice candidates, it may be several days before the complete results will be known.
