

NEWLY DISCOVERED MOSS SUBSTITUTE FOR COTTON

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.) LONDON, March 25.—The discovery has just been made that sphagnum moss, which grows wild in the British Isles, and pine wood sawdust are excellent substitutes for the more expensive surgical dressing, which are used in great quantities at the front for the wounded. The announcement of this fact has been greeted with great satisfaction since the cost of the material for the dressings hitherto has been an ever-increasing item. Sphagnum moss is found in the English lake district, in Wales and in Ireland. It is considered more absorbent than cotton wool and less likely to become sodden and uncomfortable. For these reasons it is found admirable for dressing wounds before the patient starts on the journey to the hospital. Pine wood sawdust is said to be antiseptic and when put up in gauze bags is particularly efficacious for the first dressing of head wounds. The Liverpool War Dressing organization has undertaken the work of making up these new materials ready for use and, in connection with the woman's war service bureau, is sending large consignments to the places where they are most needed. It takes but a minute of time to save dollars when you read The Bee Want Ad columns.
