

OMAHA REALTY MEN AT NEW ORLEANS

Delegation from Here to the Convention of National Real Estate Exchanges.

TO VIEW SIGHTS OF THE SOUTH

Nine or ten of Omaha's liveliest real estate men will be at New Orleans most of this week for the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, which is to begin session there this week.

Most of them left Thursday evening over the Chicago & Northwestern railway for Chicago, where they joined the Twin City Special from Minneapolis and St. Paul and went to New Orleans with that live crowd of real estate men so well known to the Omaha people. The frequent visits here of Mr. Upham and Mr. Ingersoll, president and secretary, respectively, of the International Realty association.

FUNERAL OF MRS. ANGLIN HELD FROM FAMILY HOME

The funeral services of Mrs. Robert Anglin, wife of Dr. Anglin, who has been a resident of Omaha for over a score of years, were held yesterday afternoon at the residence, Thirty-ninth and Dodge streets, Rev. Edwin Hart Jenks, D. D., officiating.

The house was filled with the warm personal friends of Dr. and Mrs. Anglin, and bowers of beautiful flowers bore a loving witness to the sympathy of many loved ones. Music was sung without accompaniment by a quartet, under the direction of Mr. Thomas J. Kelly, a close friend of the family, the selection being "Gloria, Lover of My Soul," "Peace, Perfect Peace," and "O Love, That Will Not Let Me Go."

FRACTURES SKULL BY FALL ON WINDING STAIR

Sam Meacham, an employe of the World-Herald, fell down the winding stairs in the front of the building, fracturing his skull yesterday afternoon.

Music

Symphonic Concert at Auditorium.

It was a large and flattering audience which greeted Walter Damrosch and the New York Symphony orchestra at the Auditorium last evening, an audience which more than once gave evidence of its appreciation and enthusiasm by hearty and prolonged applause, and which recalled Mr. Damrosch repeatedly. After the piano concerto, he demonstrated and insisted upon two encores in spite of repeated acknowledgments and an evident disinclination upon the part of the soloist for the second one.

The orchestra ranks high among the great orchestras of this country and the position of Mr. Damrosch both as conductor and composer has been assured for so many years that it seems almost superfluous to comment upon it. The orchestra visited Omaha last year when Miss Corina Finken of Omaha was the soloist and won many friends and that they by its ease and finish of interpretation, and the character of its program.

The program last evening was a worthy one, and held the interest of the listeners in close attention through its many varied positions. Symphony No. 3 in B minor by Tchaikovsky was the opening number. The majestic themes were well brought out, first in the violins, then among the wood winds and now and then working up to an effective climax in the brasses.

The strong rhythmic swing of this number is maintained throughout. The Andante Cantabile was full of rich colors and the glowing harmonies of this great Russian composer, and was played with beautiful tone quality and songful freedom.

ANOTHER EASTERN ARCHITECT COMES TO OMAHA.

T. P. Bialles, until recently of Chicago, has joined the architectural staff of the Bankers' Realty Investment company. Mr. Bialles studied at the Art Institute of Chicago and architectural engineering at the Chicago Technical college and has had many years of experience in large building designs. He has worked in educational building and other public building designing in some of the country's largest and most prominent architectural offices.

Among the best known buildings upon which he has been engaged were the La Salle Hotel of Chicago and the Palace theater of New York City. He has also had much ecclesiastical building design experience. For four years he was the chief draftsman in the office of one of Chicago's prominent domestic building architects.

accompanying material. The second was a melodram, "Achilles Facing the Chariot," which was marked by strong rhythmic impetus. It was highly suggestive of its title. The melodram for flute, clarinet and harp played by Messrs. Kincaid, Langenus and Lollis, which followed, was such an agreeable combination of instruments and so full of melody that an encore was given in the shape of another melodram from the same play, "Iphigenia's Farewell" brought a violin solo by Mr. Jacques Renard. This was, as the name implies, of sadness of character and was played with the utmost taste by Mr. Renard. The orchestra shone to excellent advantage in all of this group and reflected great credit upon Mr. Damrosch in his double role.

The closing number was the concerto for piano in D major by Chopin, which electrified by Mr. Hoffman. This concerto is essentially brilliant. The first movement "moderato con moto" introduces its various themes and counter themes clearly, and these were clothed with magnetic charm by Mr. Hoffman. The second, in F major, was equally good. Mr. Hoffman opportunity to show the many dancier tints upon his palette as well as his supreme musicianship. It was in the "allegro," however, that Mr. Hoffman fairly took the breath by his bravura. The runs flowed and pulsed under his flying fingers, the chord leaps were frequent and taken at the greatest speed and in the return of the original theme, and heavy octave work in the left hand, his power was tremendous. Yet, through it all Mr. Hoffman never lost his clearness of detail, assurance of technique nor total balance.

He truly deserves his high place as one of the great interpreters of piano music at the present day. His encores were, first, Mendelssohn's "Spinning Song," played with almost fairylike delicacy, the second, a Chopin "Nocturne," which proved Mr. Hoffman as finished an artist in this style of music as he is of any other he may choose to present.

The orchestra responded to but one encore which if it was not mistaken was an English dance by Percy Grainger with piano accompaniment.

Northwest Club in Battle to Secure Use of School Rooms

Northwest Improvers, meeting first on the grounds of the Monmouth Park school and then at the home of Mr. Good-year, nearby, resolved last night emphatically to make the Board of Education take back its recent order prohibiting the use of the school buildings for public meetings.

The members after warm debate declared the board was using the scabrous epidemic as an excuse for shutting off the use of the buildings until such time as a matter of fact, they asserted, the epidemic was under control and there was no more danger in their holding meetings in the school buildings. A committee consisting of Fred Martin, J. A. Harper and Ed Black was named to give the resolution publicity and to present it to the members of the board.

in five years," said the admiral, "and how can you train a corps of strategists in that time? Great Britain has been 500 years training its men and building up its navy. We can never advance to first place until we change our system of direction and preparation for war. We can't catch up with Germany in five years. As to training men, we need to train enlisted men, but the greatest need is the training of the admirals."

Admiral Fluke, who has been the center of a storm of criticism of the navy since he resigned as aide for operations a year ago, was not inclined to dwell upon his differences with Secretary Daniels. In response to questions, he said leave of absence had granted him a month's absence when he asked for three months and that Mr. Daniels had told him he didn't want naval officers in Washington talking to congressmen and newspaper men.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Rear Admiral Bradley A.
