Paris Dram Shops Next to Feel Blow Of Anti-Crusade

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)
PARIS, Nov. 12.—No strong drinks for anyone before noon, and no strong drinks at any hour for women and young people of both sexes under 15 years of age. Such is the government order that has finally opened the eyes of the wine merchants to the earnestness of the anti-alcohol campaign in France. By "strong drinks" are meant all beverages containing over eighteen degrees of alcohol. They include most of the "aperitifs" or appetizers, and all brandies and liqueurs.
In the opinion of most wine merchants the measure kills the noon appetizer, and the prospect of the loss of a considerable portion of their receipts has brought about an aggressive attitude on the part of the liquor trade. "If we can't pursue our business," they say, "we can no longer pay our heavy rents." As the wine merchants are among the few who have paid their rents regularly, their measure has involved protestations from real estate owners.
"Any attempt to suppress the sale of alcohol in wine shops before noon," declares the secretary of the Liquor Dealers' association, "will simply result in a far greater consumption—exactly the contrary of what is desired. The workman who takes a small liqueur glass of brandy in his coffee at the wine shop will take his coffee at home and pour into it without measuring the alcohol that he can buy by the quart at any grocery store; consequently more drunkenness instead of less."
Distillers, who have foreseen further restrictions in the sale of alcohol, have anticipated them to a certain extent. One of them that produces a beverage that largely resembles aldehyde reduced the strength of his product from forty degrees alcohol to twenty-three degrees. The temperance advocates and government authorities contend that if the strength of such drinks may be reduced from forty to twenty-three degrees without appreciable harm to business, it can be further reduced to less than eighteen degrees with great benefit to the public. Many wine merchants also philosophically conclude that the man who drank strong liquors will content himself with milder ones. The attitude of the drinker himself seems to bear out this theory. For the most part he takes it all as a good joke, with no thought of resistance.

School Girls Hear Secrets of Beauty

Some infallible beauty secrets were disclosed by Mrs. Ruth Butte Carson of the Boston Dress league to several hundred high school girls at the Central High school Thursday afternoon. The sweet young things hung upon her words of wisdom and at the close accorded her much applause. Mrs. Carson is en route to the Pacific coast, but plans to return to give a series of talks to school girls and also a number of parlor talks. She advocates a course in beauty and simplicity of clothes to be established in the local schools.
"Don't powder or paint—common boards are the only things that are ever white-washed," Mrs. Carson told the girls.
"Don't wear silks, satins or velvets, or discarded party dresses to school."
"Filmy lace blouses—highly polished nails, short veils, hair ribbons, the well known "dip" in the hairdress and picture hats worn to school or business were among the things decried by the dress expert.
Aeroplane, windmill and butterfly bows on hats, at the moment most popular, were swatted by Mrs. Carson.
"Your dress should express your character or your occupation," suggested Mrs. Carson. "The fabric should be determined by your occupation and your pocketbook. The lines of the dress should follow the natural lines of the figure, with the waist line somewhere near where your waist is." This sally brought peals of laughter from the school girls.
Mrs. Carson is known as "the lady with the pockets." She has these handy affairs on all her gowns, some of them detachable.
Made over Again.

DEADLY GERMAN GAS BOMBS—The rather innocent looking round objects in the cases are in reality the deadly German hand gas grenades. This supply was captured by the French after a particularly hard fight in the Champagne region.

GERMAN GAS HAND GRENADES

To Help Reduce Demo Shortage by Saving the Pieces of String

Whaddya think of this here C. W. McCune, recently appointed collector of customs and custodian of the federal building, advising Postmaster John C. Wharton how he might save money in the postoffice by saving the twine with which bundles of letters are tied and using it again instead of throwing it away?
That's what he did. This mere demagogue, recently appointed collector of customs and custodian of the federal building, advising Postmaster John C. Wharton how he might save money in the postoffice by saving the twine with which bundles of letters are tied and using it again instead of throwing it away?
But the P. M. was ready for this parvenu aspirant to the title of Grand Master Perforage Purveyor of the postoffice. Oh, he was ready with sparkling wit, quip and rejoinder. Just listen.
Colonel McCune saw a Washington dispatch in the paper, stating that Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Blakelee had called attention to the fact that many postmasters were saving the twine which came around packages of letters and thus cutting down considerably the $2,000,000 annual twine bill of the government. So Colonel McCune gives a chuckle, calls for scissors and paste, clips the item and sends it down to Judge Wharton with the suggestion that he start a twine ball. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," wrote Colonel McCune.
Back came a neatly typewritten letter from the postmaster.
"I'll eat the pudding," he said, "if you'll chew the twine."
Pretty neat, eh? Notice the play of words on "twine." Great.
"I take pleasure, furthermore," continued the letter, "in advising you that under a beneficent republican administration all possible economies in the administration of the people's business are rigidly practiced. We don't even cut the knots off of used pieces of twine. We take the trouble to untie them, thus securing that much additional string for use again."
Need it be added that on receipt of this bit of brilliant and scintillating repartee from the postmaster, Colonel McCune immediately relinquished all hope of succeeding to the title of grand master perforage purveyor, at least until after the retirement of Mr. Wharton from office.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

P. Macklonis Arrested on Suspicion of Being Implicated in Robberies.

EXPENSIVE WATCH ON MOLLICH
P. Macklonis, an Austrian, was arrested last evening with his hands near the inside coatpocket of Pete Mandevan, Twenty-sixth and Q streets. According to Mandevan and two other witnesses, Macklonis was going through his pocket maintaining peace by force.
Macklonis resisted Officer Gaughan and caused considerable trouble at the police station. He was with another young man about 20 years of age, and it is thought that the two may be guilty of numerous holdups and petty robberies that have been reported in the last few weeks. It is suspected that the man and his pal slugged and robbed Charles Gay while the latter was going home, at Twenty-fourth and F streets, last evening at 10 o'clock. Gay will be called in today to identify his assailant if possible.

Carries Expensive Watch.

A peculiar nickel-plated watch of Urbanian make, the most expensive of its kind, was found on the person of Tony Mollich, arrested at 830 last evening at Twenty-eighth and Q streets by Officer Spear on a charge of drunkenness and resisting an officer. The man carried a money belt containing $50 in gold coin.

Entertain for Miss Fiala.

Girls on the Alleys.

The bowling girls of the South Side have about doubled their numbers since Herb Garlow has granted them exclusive use of the alleys on Thursday evenings. A reorganization has taken place and four teams have been formed, two each opposing under the monicker of the "Oh, Me! Oh, My!" league.
Last evening in the first contests under the new schedule the Buster Browns defeated the Charles Chaplins in two contests and tied the other a 4-1 up. The Chaplins lagged at times, but rallied to the tie in the final period up under the leadership of the captain, Miss Elsie Housman. Elsie is some bowler.
