

TO USE AEROPLANE TO WATCH HIS SHEEP

Big Flockmaster of Wyoming to Try New Scheme to Guard His Flocks.

MORE HANDY THAN AN AUTO

Jim Dickie of Thermopolis, Wyo., is in town, enroute home from a trip to the Pacific coast.

Next year, according to a statement made by Mr. Dickie, he is going to introduce an innovation in the matter of looking after sheep, and keeping in touch with them.

Before leaving San Francisco Mr. Dickie contracted for an aeroplane to be built and delivered to him at Thermopolis prior to May 1 of next year.

Covers Wide Area. "For a man who is in the sheep raising business to any great extent, my idea is there is nothing quite equal to aeroplane as a convenience and a labor saving machine."

Joke's On Them! Petition Signers Not Legal Voters. The interesting fact has developed that several signatures attached to the petition to put the name of Charles E. Hughes in the presidential primary belong to men not eligible at the time to vote a republican primary ballot.

With an aeroplane it is going to be different. When I get my machine next spring, I can get into it any morning, start out and without hurrying, visit all my camps and get home the same day.

Four of City Dads Would Employ Only Musicians of Union. Facing the possibility of the Auditorium being placed on the "unfair" list by the American Federation of Musicians and the Central Labor union of Omaha, City Commissioners Kugel, Withnell, Butler and Mayor Dahman voted to adopt a report of the committee of the whole, declaring that only union music should be engaged for municipal concerts.

Three Specialists Give Testimony in Singer's Law Suit

Expert testimony by a nerve specialist, voice specialist and vaudeville specialist was given in the suit of Miss Hazel Solomon against the Pullman company for $25,000 on account of personal injuries alleged to have been received when she fell from an upper berth.

Mrs. Millie Ryan, whose studio is at 311 South Thirty-fifth street, was an animated witness. In a blue tailored suit, white fur, black velvet hat with two balls depending from one side, white veil and carrying a brown chateleine bag with a green handle, she was a striking witness.

Mrs. Ryan testified that the young woman's voice, so far as singing is concerned, seems to be entirely lost.

Manager Byrne of the Orpheum theater was a witness. He had "tried out" the plaintiff's voice, and on his recommendation the Orpheum circuit had booked her for some engagements.

The court reporter was in desperate straits at times during the expert testimony of Dr. A. A. Edginger. When a physician gives voice to a sentence about an "anastomosis of the two plexes conjunctively transverse the phrenic and ulnar nerve filaments," or words to that effect, court reporters wonder whether life is worth living.

ALL OBJECTING TO TRACK PEDDLING

Hearing to Be Held at Lincoln Before the State Railway Commission.

MERCHANTS ARE PROTESTING

Most of the Omaha railroad freight officials are going to Lincoln this morning, where they will tell the State Railway commission what they think of peddling from freight cars. They are opposed to the plan and have no hesitancy in saying so. Before they get through it is probable that they will request the commission that they will request the commission to promulgate and enforce a rule that will put an end to the peddling business.

For years, at this season particularly, parties have been going into the fruit sections of this and other states. They have been buying peaches, apples and vegetables of farmers and others and shipping them into localities in the state where the supply has been short, where they have had their cars laid in on sidings and then commenced selling.

With the railroad freight offices some time ago business men in numerous Nebraska towns filed protests against the peddling from cars, contending that it injured their business; that the peddlers were not taxpayers; that they short-weighted and short-measured customers, and that their business was the cause for the reason that the peddlers did not even have to pay license.

Railroads Do Not Like It. Railroad officials were anxious to get rid of the business that they designated as a nuisance, but contended that they were unable to do so, as the railroads were common carriers and if a man paid the rate he could ship to any point he saw fit.

Later on the railroad officials and a number of merchants got together on a plan and the railroad officials filed a complaint with the commission. They charged that the setting of a car on a switch in a city, or town, and leaving it there to be peddled from, congests traffic and interferes with business. They charge that in order that persons may get into these peddling cars to examine the contents ladders are used, and while going up and down these ladders persons are frequently injured, with result that damage suits are brought against the railroads.

With the issues joined as they are and the merchants of the state and railroads working together, the opinion prevails that the business of peddling from cars will soon end so far as Nebraska is concerned.

GETS BOND ON ONE CHARGE. IS PINCHED ON ANOTHER. Charles Sunshine, who was in the hands of the federal authorities on a white slave charge, secured bond for $1,000, but had scarcely breathed the outer air when he was taken in hand again by the city authorities on a charge of wife desertion.

Federal Jurors Having Hard Task Finding the Way

The dark and devious ways of the great city made serious inroads into the ranks of the thirty "good men and true" who compose the petit jury that reported for duty in the United States court Monday.

One good man and true, whose name is withheld by request, arrived in Omaha bright and early Monday morning and hid himself to the county court house. He took up his position in a good and true manner in the criminal court room of that building, where he waited patiently until noon. Nothing happened. He allowed himself an hour for lunch, and then came back and took up his vigil, remaining there till late in the afternoon.

Then he bethought himself of a clever plan. He asked a bailiff why he wasn't called on for jury duty. He showed the bailiff his summons, the bailiff showed him the way to the postoffice building and the belated juror "showed up" Tuesday morning.

William Mangold of Gretna sat all day Monday in the court room of the federal building with the other jurors, but he failed to register his presence at the office of District Clerk Hoyt, so there was no record of his presence and when the jury members were excused for the day he went to his hotel. He discovered and rectified his error Tuesday morning.

Four of City Dads Would Employ Only Musicians of Union

Facing the possibility of the Auditorium being placed on the "unfair" list by the American Federation of Musicians and the Central Labor union of Omaha, City Commissioners Kugel, Withnell, Butler and Mayor Dahman voted to adopt a report of the committee of the whole, declaring that only union music should be engaged for municipal concerts. Commissioners Hummel, Drossel and Jardine voted against the proposition. On Thursday morning the council will consider a resolution embodying the action of the committee of the whole. Secretary Finn of the Omaha Musicians' union reported again that his organization declared the Auditorium unfair and that the American Federation of Musicians took similar action, although the latter body has not forced the matter, the expectations being that the council will recognize the union. Secretary Finn was asked what view he would take of the situation of the council next spring would advertise for bids for park music and make awards to low bidders. The reply was that the union musicians would regard such action by the council as a subterfuge. There is a law which requires the council shall advertise for bids when making an expenditure of more than $50. The park concerts last summer were $5 each and contracts were made with all local lands wishing to play. The Central Labor union will discuss the situation at the regular meeting on Friday evening. The grievance committee of the union appeared before the council on behalf of the musicians.
