By MELLIFLOIA. Thursday, November 18, 1915.

There is a distressing rumor afloat. It hints that, with the return to the styles of 1830, the little girls will be dressed in exactly the same modes as the mothers.

It may have been all very well to have dressed the girls of 1830 as adults, but one trembles to think of the children of today, with their training to individuality, given this footing with their elders. With the bit between their teeth regarding fashions, what if they would take it in hand to announce their own comings-out, presenting themselves and jarring their social careers in other ways.

The little girl of the first half of the last century was a very different feminine creation from the little girl of today, and she wore her mother's fashions as a mere echo of the mother.

The girls today show no echo tendencies—they are leaders.

Again, does every mother just fancy the idea of dressing her daughter to look as old as possible?

There are two very good reasons that the style will die an early death.

Omaha's Woman Attorney a Saff, But She Wants Men Clients, Too

Much burning of the midnight oil has given Omaha its only woman lawyer in the person of Mrs. Stella B. Wilson. She has just been admitted to the bar by the Nebraska supreme court and will "hang out her shingle" as soon as she secures an office.

Most of Mrs. Wilson's study has been done at night. During the last three years while her friends and acquaintances were attending theaters, dances or parties, playing cards or seeking other amusements, Omaha's prospective woman lawyer was attending Creighton night school or studying Blackstone's vast field of legal lore. Her vacations from work in the office of the clerk of the district court were not spent at summer resorts, but in learning what evidence should be received and what is barred in court contests between litigants. Most of last summer Mrs. Wilson spent attending law school at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Mrs. Wilson has always believed, she declares, that a woman should have a profession by which she may earn her own living if necessary. After the death of her husband several years ago and the ensuing disarrangement of her plans she secured employment at the court house. She became interested in legal questions and soon determined on the legal profession as her future career. She studied in an attorney's office for a time, then entered night school.

Mrs. Wilson is a suffragist, but takes that doctrine as a matter of course and doesn't believe that she has done anything astonishing in becoming a lawyer.

"Any business woman is bound to be a suffragist," Mrs. Wilson said in reply to a question.

"A woman is just as capable of becoming a lawyer as a man," declared Omaha's modern Portia. "Women are succeeding in all lines of business, and there is no reason why they should not succeed in the professions."

It was suggested that Omaha women should find in Mrs. Wilson an especially ardent advocate of their legal rights, but she declared men clients would be as welcome in her offices as those of the gentler sex.

DREAMS OF GOLD STRIKE COME TRUE

James Keenan Dreams of Gold Three Nights in Row and Then the Strike Occurs.

HAS CLAIMS WITHIN SIX MILES

For the last three nights dreams of gold all around him have disturbed the slumbers of James Keenan, 1538 South Twenty-eighth street, a foreman at the Armour packing plant.

At breakfast Thursday morning he was suddenly greeted by Mrs. A. S. Midlam, a neighbor living at 1542 South Twenty-eighth street, who rushed into the house with a copy of The Bee and pointed to a front page article about a rich placer gold strike in the Black Hills.

The reported bonanza proved to be within six miles of a number of gold claims owned by Keenan, his son, Joseph H. Keenan, and T. J. O'Brien, the latter two being manager and proprietor respectively, of the Henshaw hotel.

"At last my dreams have come true," the elder Keenan exclaimed. "The Black Hills country is coming into its own again."

Other Omahans Have Claims.

He plans to go to the Hills soon with other Omahans who have mining interests quite near the location of the big strike. Among other Omahans who have gold claims near the reported rich mine are: Herbert Keenan, freight solicitor for the Northwestern railroad in Omaha; T. F. Maloney, retired, Park avenue and Pacific streets; members of the Coad family of this city; and the father of A. E. Hall of the Omaha smelter.

Considerable gold has already been taken from the Keenan claims, Joseph H. Keenan says, and he wears a ring made from placer gold secured by his father on one of the claims. The elder Mr. Keenan lived for many years in the Pactola district of the Black Hills, and with his sons and T. J. O'Brien, he now owns fifteen claims of twenty acres each, just six miles west of the Terry Lodge strike reported in current press dispatches.

He says he believes firmly in dreams, and considers his recent dream of gold a sure indication of the richness of his Black Hills gold claims. He has been living in Omaha with his daughter, Mrs. George Alwine, for some time, but now wants to return to the Hills and work his gold holdings some more.

LIEUT. TOM HAYES, RETIRED, IS DEAD

Former Omaha Police Officer Passes Away After Illness Extending Over Three Years.

ON FORCE TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

Thomas Hayes, retired lieutenant of the Omaha police department, died Thursday morning at his home, 905 Castelar street. He was 74 years of age.

He had been ill ever since his retirement from the force over three years ago and his death had been expected since an attack several days ago, when a blood vessel in his head burst.

He had been living with his son, John, since his wife died three years ago, and is survived by one other son, Thomas, of this city.

Lieutenant Hayes came to Omaha in 1890 from the south, as a private in the army, in which he served seventeen years. He is a tailor by trade, and it was in this capacity that he worked while in the employ of Uncle Sam. Shortly after his arrival here he became a member of the police department, in time becoming sergeant, then drummer, and finally receiving the title of lieutenant, the only officer of that rank ever serving on the force.

He was an officer of unquestionable courage, and was the central figure of many heroic episodes during his twenty-five years of service with the department. He was also for a short period in the employ of the Union Pacific.

Ladies Will Meet to Complete Plans for Christmas Fair

The ladies of twenty-four churches will meet Friday morning at 10 o'clock in the small assembly room of the Young Women's Christian association to complete plans for the seventh annual Christmas fair to be held in the court of the Bee building from December 6 to 15, inclusive.

This fair has come to be looked upon as a permanent institution by Omaha church women and is spoken of very highly, as evidenced by the following extract from one pastor's acceptance. He says: "We are very grateful to The Bee Publishing company for its generosity, expressed, as it has been for the last six years, in granting this space to the women of the different churches of the city."

No Saloon in Grain Exchange Building

A rumor that a saloon was to be opened on the ground floor of the new Grain Exchange building at Nineteenth and Harney streets, aroused business men and residents of that neighborhood, many of whom are opposed to such an innovation. Secretary F. P. Manchester of the Omaha Grain exchange quieted the talk, however, by denying that the exchange was considering such a proposition.

"I have not heard a thing about it, and I know that no space has been leased for a saloon in the new building," he said.

A police officer was summoned and the Mexican was looked up yesterday after receiving his savings. He was discharged with about $1,000,000 worth of advice as interest for his deposit.

Has Close Escape When Auto Hit by Train at Crossing

R. O. McDanel, 24 South Sixteenth street, was hurt, but escaped serious injury, when an auto which he was driving was struck Tuesday afternoon by Union Pacific train No. 9 at the Sargy crossing on the Millard road. On June 11, 1914, four Omaha people, occupants of an auto, were struck at this crossing by a train and killed. McDanel was just crossing the track when his engine choked and he got out of the car to crank it. No. 9 came along, wrecked the car and hurled McDanel ten feet. He sustained painful but not serious injuries.
