

Society

By MELLIFICIA. Wednesday, December 1, 1915.

SOMEONE, signing herself "Peggy," wants to know how she may get into society.

Peggy states she has money. I hope she has, just odds of it, or else it should take a woman with more brains than I have to tell her how to get in.

Above all, Peggy, be careful, very careful, and make no rash moves. You write your mother is more anxious than you that you land socially. I am glad your mother is ambitious for you, but this very thing gives me a little anxiety for you.

Don't let your mother show she is anxious, nor desirous. You must not start the game with the handicap of "climber" or "self-rusher" tacked to you. Have your mother put on an aloof air, that she herself cares nothing for the frivolities of the world; only on your account will she unbend. She should wear the oldest, rarest lace, heirloom jewelry and surround herself with at least a century-old mahogany, plate and china. The correct setting means more than half the game.

Above all, don't boast of your antiques and rare pieces; don't fibe nor make pretenses; let them speak for you what they will.

Of course, there is your mother's language, as you say. But you also state she is most determined and ambitious. Turn this to something constructive, then. There are very good books, costing in the paper binding no more than 25 cents. These books have lists of what to avoid in speaking. Help your mother to commit these things to memory and to practice them in her speech at home. Let her cultivate a lower tone and remember the goldenness of silence if she can't.

I wish you success, PEGGY, with your money and your good looks, your dreams and your hopes, and, winning the game, may you find it worth what it cost.

Debut of Miss McCord.

Miss Margery McCord, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Halleck McCord, was presented to society this afternoon at a debut tea given by her mother at the McCord home. Two hundred and fifty guests called during the afternoon and were received in the drawing room by Mrs. McCord, Miss McCord and an aunt, Mrs. Samuel McCord of St. Joseph. The grandmother, Mrs. James McCord, also of St. Joseph, who had planned to attend, was deterred by illness.

Miss McCord made a pretty picture in her attractive pale green tulle and poul de meteor gown and carrying an armful of Killarney Queen roses. The foundation of the gown was of the pale green poul de meteor, with a drop skirt of pale green tulle and another one of the meteor falling from rolls of silver cloth wired to give the bouffant effect. The bodice was high-waisted, with a square-cut neck and tiny sleeves of green tulle and cream lace was introduced in the trimmings. Mrs. McCord's gown was of lavender charmeuse, with a lavender net tulle beaded in shades of purple and white graduating from the deep shades upward. The gown was made short length, with a square-cut bodice and Chantilly lace sleeves.

The spacious McCord home was converted into a floral bower, the dining room being particularly attractive. The centerpiece was a Tiffany one, a tall silver vase and four smaller silver vases filled with Russell roses and pink-shaded candles being the scheme used for the decoration. The floral tributes to the debutante were banked throughout the rooms.

Miss Loretta De Lone gave a harp program, with violin and cello accompaniment. Among those asked to assist were:

With the School Set.

Miss Regina Connell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Connell, is expected home from Miss Guiles and Miss Evans school of Boston about December 17 for the Christmas vacation. Miss Mary Gifford and Miss Clara Hart of Council Bluffs, who attend school at Dana Hall, Wellesley, Mass., will accompany Miss Connell.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard A. Spaulding yesterday morning received word of the illness of their daughter, Miss Nan Spaulding, at Chevy Chase seminary in Washington, where she is attending school. Miss Spaulding had an attack of appendicitis, which necessitated an immediate operation. Mrs. Spaulding was prepared to leave for Washington last evening when word was received from an aunt and uncle living in Washington that everything was being done and that she was feeling as well as could be expected and would be well enough to come home for the Christmas vacation. Mrs. Spaulding abandoned her trip, but will go to Chicago to meet her daughter on her return. Miss Spaulding's illness interfered with her attendance at the Army-Navy game at New York, which she had planned to attend, was deterred by illness.

Popularity of Haddorff Pianos

The strongest evidence of how widespread is the popularity of Haddorff Pianos and Player Pianos is shown by the great demand for Haddorff Grands for Concerts and Recitals.

This demand became so urgent that it has necessitated our having in stock, for concert purposes alone, several grands, both concert and medium size, and they are in almost constant use. This is one of the most striking tributes that could possibly be paid to any piano.
