

MERCURY IS RISING IN THE SOUTHWEST

Temperature Generally Ten Degrees Higher in Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Texas.

WIRE CONDITIONS IMPROVED

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 14.—Passing of the high pressure area to the upper Mississippi valley and Great lakes region today is bringing relief to the southwest from the cold wave. The mercury rose from four to nine degrees in Missouri over night, a little more in Kansas and Oklahoma, while in northern and western Texas the reading reported to the local weather bureau generally were ten degrees higher than yesterday.

Snow for Missouri. Slowly rising temperatures, with increasing cloudiness that may bring snow in Missouri, Kansas and the northern part of Oklahoma were predicted. At Kansas City the mercury stood at 7 1/2 degrees below zero at 6 o'clock this morning.

Four and a half hours later it had risen to the zero mark. Des Moines reported 15 degrees below zero at 7 a. m.; St. Joseph, 16 below; Concordia, Kan., 8 below; Dodge City, 2 above; Fort Smith, Ark., 2 above, and Corpus Christi, Tex., 2 above.

Warmer at St. Paul. ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 14.—Gradually rising temperatures throughout the central northwest states today brought relief from the intense cold of the last two days and enabled railroads to resume normal service.

In the Twin Cities the temperature was 17 degrees below early today, as compared with 21 below twenty-four hours previously.

Cold Wave Reaches Atlantic. WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The cold wave has reached the Atlantic states, although not in full force, over the north section and cold weather continues westward to the Rocky mountains, although with a considerable rise in temperature west of the Mississippi river.

Four Below at Chicago. CHICAGO, Jan. 14.—The cold weather which has prevailed in the middle west for the last thirty-six hours, continued today, but the weather bureau predicted higher temperatures before night. In this city at 7 a. m., street thermometers in the downtown district registered a degree below zero.

Hail and traffic west of Chicago is still far from normal, although reports from Iowa and Minnesota, where the most serious trouble was encountered from the storm, state that conditions are improving.

HAUSER'S NERVE BREAKS AS TRIAL APPROACHES END

(Continued from Page One.) Last thing of the law—the presumption of innocence till guilt is proven. And I most firmly and sincerely believe that no person can say Arthur Hauser's guilt has been proven, beyond a question of a doubt by the case which the state has made.

Counsel for the state has asked you if you are going to turn Hauser loose upon this community. Gentlemen, the question is not the interest of the community nor of Hauser's family. Hauser's life is not worth much. He is only a man, like the rest of us. He may have sinned. He has sinned.

You should forget the interest of the community, the city, the state, his old mother, his wife, and his daughter. But since counsel for the state has mentioned the effect of the result of this trial, let me say a few words concerning those on whom a conviction would bear heavily.

Plends for Baby. Arthur Hauser has a little baby there, lying in her mother's arms. By her side sits the man's aged mother. Some time when Arthur Hauser lies buried whether in a prison yard or in a better graveyard, that little girl will be a woman and she will marry and become a mother. When some one asks her: "Who are you?" she will answer: "I am the daughter of Art Hauser, who was electrocuted for murder, the first man to sit in the death chair in the state of Nebraska."

In Kansas where my home is they have abandoned the death penalty, but you have it in Nebraska and if you believe Arthur Hauser is guilty of this murder, I tell you to send him to the death chair.

Gentlemen of the jury, where were you the night of October 15, I was in the sanctuary of my home with my wife and baby. If someone said I was somewhere else how would I prove where I was. I'd have to call that loving wife. That is what Hauser did.

Urges Jury to Believe Wife. "What is to protect you if your wife is not to be believed when she comes on the stand, unshaken and says you were with her. Is she not to be believed even if her testimony is not corroborated?"

But in this case there was corroboration. Hauser and Mrs. Hauser said the laundry was delivered the night of the murder. I went to the laundry company and they told me "No. I came back and said: 'My God, Hauser, are you lying to us?' He said, 'No.'"

Charles A. Linter, driver for the Chicago Laundry company, called to the witness stand by the state to refute the alibi which Mrs. Hauser, the bandit's wife, had sought to establish for him, broke down at the last minute and admitted that his cash record showed he had delivered laundry to the Hauser home on October 15, the date of the murder of the late master of the Woodmen of the World.

Crowd Changes Fats. This meant little in itself, but, coupled with his previous denial and the testimony which he had given as a faithful wife and devoted mother, had given an earlier testimony, it had the appearance of a tremendous blow to the prosecution.

It was then that the crowd, which heretofore had sat patiently quiet, demanding death for the slayer of Smith, in a flash changed its mood.

"There, then, boys," was signaled to the jury, hundreds of men and women suddenly clapping their hands and stamping their feet as one person. It was said by court officials to have been one of the most dramatic scenes ever staged in an Omaha court. Court officials leaped to their feet, saluting for order. Judge English threatened to clear the room, and in a second order had been restored. Hauser and his lawyers were jubilant, and state's counsel were correspondingly downcast. Lawyers on both sides said that in previous conversations Linter had refused to admit that he delivered laundry to the Hausers on October 15.

Index Card Leads to Climax. An office index card for October 15, inadvertently brought into court by Linter, led to the climax. Attorneys for the defense seized it, found that it showed Linter had called at the Hauser home for articles to be laundered on the day before the murder, introduced it in evidence, then asked Linter whether his cash book did not show a delivery on the following day.

The witness examined the book and found the entry. "I did deliver laundry there on October 15," he said.

A moment's questioning by the county attorney failed of results, and court adjourned for the noon recess.

Mrs. Hauser had testified her husband was home with her at 9 o'clock the night of the murder, and that she got the money from him with which to pay Linter when he delivered it.

Mrs. Hauser, by her evidence, repaid her husband for the kindness and affection which, she declares, he has lavished on her and their baby during all the long series of desperate crimes of which he is accused. Her devotion to him is manifested by her evident happiness at being with him and by her willingness to do whatever he desires.

She didn't want to have her photograph taken, but "I'll ask Art," she said. "Art is willing," she said next, and photographs of her and the baby were taken.

Mrs. Hauser conversed more than half an hour with her husband before she testified, during a recess of court. Then she was called to the stand.

Married Eleven Years. "My name is Mrs. May Hauser," she testified. "I have been married to Arthur Hauser eleven years on February 4, and we came to Omaha on October 1 and left October 21."

"Do you remember the night of October 15?"

"I do."

"Do you know where you were?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who was with you?"

"My husband and my baby."

"Where were you?"

"At 217 Webster street from 5:30 o'clock Saturday until Sunday morning."

"How do you fix the date?"

Laundryman Came at Nine. "The laundryman came at 9 o'clock. Also Arthur and I were going to go down to buy me a coat. Arthur said, 'I believe it best not to take our baby out tonight, because it is raining.'"

"What laundry was it?"

"The Chicago laundry."

"Who paid the laundry boy?"

"I did."

"Where did you get the money?"

Remedy Prescribed by Many Doctors

Compound of Simple Laxative Herbs Proves Most Efficient.

Dr. W. A. Evans, writing for the Chicago Tribune, makes the assertion that practically everyone, at some time or other, suffers from constipation. This applies regardless of age or condition in life.

The cause of stomach waste in the bowels is evidenced in various ways: flat, cruetation of foul stomach gases, sick headache, languor, all indicate constipation, and call for prompt attention, not only to relieve the present discomfort, but also to avoid possible disease that follows neglect of this important function.

Harsh cathartics and violent purgatives should not be employed, as these afford only temporary relief, while they serve to shock the entire system. A mild laxative such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is far preferable and is now the remedy generally used and prescribed by many doctors. It is free from opiate or narcotic drugs, acts easily and pleasantly, without griping or other pain and is a safe, effective family remedy.

Mr. Chas. Schell writes that he found relief himself by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and now keeps it on hand for family use. A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should have a place in every family medicine chest. A trial bottle can be obtained free of charge, by writing to Dr. W. B.
