THE Keating-Owen bill which is concerned with child labor, has been discussed in local women's club circles during the last week and it has been strongly urged that every effort be exerted looking toward the passage of a national child labor law.

Nebraska is particularly fortunate in an excellent child labor law with very little of child labor conditions with which to contend. At the last meeting of the social science department of the Omaha Woman's club, the Keating-Owen bill was unanimously endorsed.

At the meeting of the club proper, Monday, Mrs. C. W. Hayes, chairman of the legislative department of the Nebraska Federation of Women's clubs, will present the subject and will urge all women to call upon the congressman from this district to support the passage of the bill.

By invitation of the Asheville (N. C.) Board of Trade and the North Carolina child labor committee the annual child labor conference will be held in Asheville, February 2 to 6, the National Child Labor committee has announced. The program for the meetings is not yet complete, but many prominent speakers have already promised to appear, among whom are Dr. Felix Adler of the Ethical Culture society, New York; Homer Folks, chairman of the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis; Lillian D. Wald, head of the Nurses Settlement, New York; Florence Kelley, secretary of the National Consumers' league, and Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue, New York, as well as Owen R. Lovejoy, A. J. McKelway and E. N. Clopper of the staff of the National Child Labor committee. The general topic for the meeting is "Safeguarding American Childhood" and special attention will be given to the Keating-Owen federal child labor bill which has just been referred by Speaker Clark to the house committee on labor. Local child labor problems will be studied and there will be discussions of the effect of child labor on health, education and industry, and of standards of factory inspection. To make these discussions of wide interest the National Child Labor committee has invited all state health, factory inspection and school officers to attend and has asked the governor of each state to send five delegates.

Not for a long while has marriage taken from the circle of Omaha young women so charming an acquisition as Miss Callahan has been since she came here to live with her grandmother, the late Mrs. W. P. Callahan.

The wedding of Miss Callahan and Mr. Twachtman, who is a son of the well known artist, John H. Twachtman, will take place in the chantry of Grace Episcopal church, one of the most delightful and impressive of New York churches, at 4 o'clock Thursday, following which there will be a dinner at some hotel for the wedding guests. The wedding will be a family affair, but a few intimate friends of the bride's parents from Dayton and some Omaha friends who are in New York City have been bidden to the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Baum of Philadelphia and their daughter Katherine, who formerly lived in Omaha, will also be among the wedding guests.

Mr. Aiden Twachtman, brother of the groom, will be the best man, but the bride will be without attendants. Other members of the groom's family who will witness the ceremony are his mother, Mrs. John Twachtman and his sisters, Miss Violet Twachtman and his sisters, Miss Violet Twachtman and Mrs. Richard Pell of the New York family of Fells.

Where the young couple will go on their honeymoon is being kept a deep, dark secret, but on their return, they will occupy the residence of Mrs.

Twachtman in Greenwich, Conn., while she is spending the winter in the south. Miss Callahan has many friends in and about Greenwich as she attended school at Westover in Middlebury, Conn.

Miss Callahan had one deep regret as the train pulled out of the station last evening and that was that she had to leave her "Jolie" or "Sweetheart" behind.

"Jolie has been my very dearest pal and it breaks my heart to leave her, but I am going to send for her as soon as I can," she exclaimed.

"Jolie" has been a frequent traveling companion of Miss Callahan when she was bound for a certain destination, but since her plans include traveling about so much, it was thought best to leave "Jolie" in Omaha for awhile.

The regret of the younger set is most keen that their charming companion is to be taken from Omaha by her marriage, but the future Mrs. Twachtman has promised her friends that she will make frequent visits to Omaha.

QUANTITY and not quantity" would seem the best phrase to describe the coming week. There is little promised, but what there is in store is choice, one might say rare—Monday Madame Paderewski will sell dolls in the Hotel Fontenelle and at the Auditorium in her husband's dressing room. "Buy a doll and save a baby" is the keynote of the affair, and many charming Omaha maids and matrons have pledged their efforts to promote the sale. These dolls were made in Paris by the painters and sculptors standing highest in the artistic world. The proceeds go to the Polish Victims' Relief fund.

On the day following the descension of Madame Paderewski and her famed husband into our very midst, the always delightful Thomas Kellys will give their folklore recital at the Fontenelle, Irish song for the benefit of the Omaha Social Settlement association.

On Thursday, Miss Charlotte Callahan, a one-year girl, will be married. Aside from the interest attaching to the marriage of almost a bud, the wedding is unique in many ways, performed in that quaint chapel of Grace church in New York, which is curiously called the "chantry" and the only one of its kind this side of the Atlantic. Besides this, Miss Callahan by her marriage is uniting a western family with one connected with one of the oldest and proudest lines in the east, the Pells of New York, a family which has given its name to many an estate and manor. Aside from being connected with the Pells, the bridegroom, Quentin Twachtman, is the son of the well known artist, the late John H. Twachtman.

On Saturday afternoon is another wedding of lively interest to Omaha society, when Miss Florence Cudahy becomes the bride of Mr. Vaughn Spalding in the cathedral of the Holy Name in Chicago.

Another distinguished visitor of the week will be Dr. Powys, who will lecture before the Fine Arts society Friday.

The theaters have come in for much attention during the week, and promises for the future are alluring. For next Saturday night, for example, we will have the Dramatic club of the University of Nebraska in a great comedy written by a Nebraska author.
