Jeanette Gilder Was Full of Humor and Lacked Vanity

By MELLIFICIA. In the passing away of Jeanette Gilder many incidents and anecdotes of the great critic will be brought to notice.

There is one little remark of hers, made to a former Omaha girl, that seems to show the peculiar touch of the humor she could turn upon her own self.

It was a distinctive trait of this great woman's character that she was a woman who was distinctively pretty, petite, graceful, and she had just come to New York City after winning quite a name for herself in southern social circles as a beauty.

The girl called on Miss Gilder with a letter of introduction and was most cordially received. Miss Gilder then leaned back in her chair and surveyed the Nebraska girl with the quiet admiration of a true artist.

"You are a suffragist," she presently said with confidence. "Yes," said the girl brightening; "but how did you know it?"

"Because you are so polite, so pretty, so pronouncedly feminine," said Miss Gilder; "your style are always suffragist. That is the queer thing about it that I do not understand. You know, I suppose, that I am an anti!"

"Yes," said the girl a little timidly. Miss Gilder laughed. "That's the way it always is—a big woman like me, without a vestige of beauty, and a masculine type is always the anti!"

Happy old age. When old age carries with it hosts of friends, good health and an abundance of this world's goods, it should be as happy as any period of our existence.

That is old age as it should be, but too often it means poor digestion, torpid bowels, a sluggish liver and a general feeling of ill health, despondency and misery.

This condition can be greatly alleviated, however, by taking one of Chamberlain's Tablets each day immediately after supper.

That will strengthen the digestion, tone up the liver and regulate the bowels, then that feeling of despondency will give way to one of hope and good cheer. Obtainable everywhere. -Advertisement.
