

Miss Pearl White ..... Elaine Dodge Mr. Lionel Barrymore ..... Marcius Del Mar

WRITTEN BY ARTHUR B. REEVE The Well-Known Novelist and the Creator of the "Craig Kennedy" Stories

Oramatized Into a Photo-Play by Chas. W. Goddard, Author of "The Perils of Pauline," "The Exploits of Elaine."

Everything you read here today was trickling in through the canopy from as if he had been wrestling with a veri-you can see in the fascinating Pathe the curb to the Dodge door, carriages table devil. Down in the hall, I had again met ture Theaters this week. Next Sun-day another chapter of "The Exsidewalk ploits of Elaine" and new Pathe reels.

(Copyright, 1915, by the Star Co. All Foreign Rights Reserved.)

Synopsis of Previous Chapter

Where the Chase Led

CHAPTER II.

So confident was Elaine that Kennedy was still alive that she would not admit to herself what to the rest of us seemed obvious

She even refused to accept Aunt Jone- shadow. phine's hints and decided to give a masquerade ball which she had planned as the last event of the season before she closed the Dodge town house and opened her country house on the shore of Connecticut.

It was shortly after the strange appearance of the fussy old gentleman that I dropped in one afternoon to find Elaine addressing invitations, while Aunt Josephine helped her. As we chatted, 1 picked up one from the pile and me-chanically contemplated the address.

"M. Del Mar, Hotel La Coste, New York City.

my domino girl, a few minutes after I As I entered the ball room it was really had resigned Elaine to another of her brilliant and picturesque assemblage. numerous admirers.

Of course, I recognized Elaine in spite "I though you deserted me." I said, of her mask, almost immediately. omewhat plqued.

Characteristically, she was taiking to "You deserted me," she parried, nerthe one most striking figure on the yously. "However, I'll forgive you if floor, a tall man in red-a veritable you'll get me an loe." Mephistopheles. As the music started. I hastened to do so I hastened to do so. But no souner had awung around again, I happened to satch another glimpse of the gray friar. He was not dancing, but walking, or rather stalking, about the edge of the room, gasing about as if searching for

In the conservatory, Elaine and Mehisto had seated themselves in the breeze of an open window, somewhat in the

"You are Mis Dodge," he said earneatly. "You know me?" she isughed. "And you?" He raised his mask, disclosing the handsome face and fascinating eyes of Del Mar. "I hope you don't think I'm here in character." he laughed easily, as she started a bit. "I-I-well, I didn't think it was you,"

she blunted out. "Ah-then there is someone else you care more to dance with?" "No-uo one-no."

"I may hope, if an?"

READ IT HERE NOW-THEN SEE IT ALL IN MOVING PICTURES.

he was listening, his ear close up to the his gun ready, he lifted up the | domino mask of the domino girl. handed her a note and sat down, looking booth. "So-it's you," he grunted, about so demurely, while Elaine read: He was about to lift the "My dear Miss Dodge:

"The bearer, Miss Bertholdi, is an on some pretext. mask of the Mexican, when the bolero leaped at him, operative of mine. I would appreciate it Del Mar piled in. But sounds if you would employ her in some ca- bearded man had been standing looking carefully. downstairs alarmed them and pacity in your house, as I have reason intently at nothing in particular when the smissary, released, fied to believe that certain foreign agents Bertholdi entered. As Bailey came along, Dodge," he turned with a subtle look and will soon make another attempt to find he followed and took the next booth, his walked away. Finally he squirmed shout, Qickly he tore off the black the emissary, released, fied to believe that certain foreign agents Bortholdi entered. As Balley came along, gray friar, however, kept Kennedy's lost torpedo model. Sincerely, hat pulled over his eyes. In a moment "M. DEL MAR." his hold on Mephistopheles, Elaine looked up from reading the partition.

note. Miss Bertholdi was good to look "Well, what luck ?" asked Bailey, "Did at, and Elaine liked preity girls about you get a clue?"

"I had the torpedo model in my hands," she replied, excitedly telling him the "Jennings," she ordered, "call Marie." To the butler and her maid, Elaine story, "It is in a trunk marked 'E. gave the most careful instructions re- Dolge."

garding Miss Bertholdi, "She can help all this and more the bearded stranger you finish the packing, first," she con- drank in eagerly, cluded. A moment later Balley and Berthodl

The girl thanked her and went out left the booth and went out of the reswith Jennings and Marie, asking Jen- taurant, followed cautiously by the nings to pay her taxicab driver with stranger. On the street the two emis-

Del Mar was lying on the floor, bound and gagged, before the open safe.

clothes on a chair nearby and pulled one one trunk which was marked in big

Down in Elaine's room at the time Jennings entered. "The expressman for the

"Is he? I wonder whether they are all trunks is here, Miss Elaine," he an-of the trunks forward. On the floor lay

"Hello," he nodded to a girl in the , through the late crowd down the plat-(placed his two hands to his mouth and form. He paused before the baggage car should: Bertholdi nodded back and he took his just as one of the baggage motor trucks seat. She had begged an hour or two off rolled up loaded high with trunks and loaded the luggage on the car, watching emerged, buttoning the chauffeur's Outside the restaurant, a heavily As they tossed on one trunk marked "E. own face.

> around to the other platform. No one beard which had been his disguise and was looking and he mounted the rear of tossed it into the grass. Then he drew the baggage car and opened the door. the coat high up about his neck. There was the baggage man sitting by the side door, his back to Bailey. Bailey along the road.

hind a pile of trunks and bags. . . .

and a grade ahead. He stopped his car and got out. ocket field glass and leveled it ahead. "Wait here," ordered Del Mar. "I'll back into the dust. call when I want you."

though he could not hear the directions.

It was not necessary, however. He roadway. dragged his machine into the bushes, hid it, and hurried down the road on foot. Del Mar's chauffeur was waiting idly of a revolver was stuck under his chin. moonlight through you," growled out a harsh voice. Nevertheless, the chauffeur managed to lurch out of the car and the bearded stranger, whose revolver it was, found that he would have to shoot. Del Mar was not far enough away to risk it. The chauffeur flung himself on him and they struggled flercely, rolling over and over in the dust of the road. But the bearded stranger had a grip of steel and managed to get his fingers about the chauffeur's throat as an added insurance against a cry for help. He choked him literally into insensibility. Then, with a strength that he did not seem to possess, he picked up the limp, blue-faced body and carried it off the road and around the car. In the baggage car, the baggage man was smoking a surreptitious pipe of powerful tobacco between stations and contemplating the scenery thoughtfully through the open door.

As the engine slowed up to take a curve and a grade, Ealley who had now and then taken a peep out of a little grated window above him, crept out from his hiding place. Alrendy he had slipped a dark slik mask over his face.

As he made his way among the trunks last. and boxes, the train lurched and the bag-

From the side of the road by Del Mar's bags. He stepped back as the men car the bearded motorcyclist had just clothes and adjusting his goggles to his

"All right!" he shouted back, starting closed the door softly and squeezed be- To gether he and Del Mar managed to scramble up the embankment to the road and, one at each handle of the trunk, Finally Del Mar reached a spot on the they carried it back to the car, piling it rairoad where there were both a curve in the back.

The improvised chauffer started to take his place at the wheel and Del Mar had. Down the road the bearded and goggled his foot on the running board to get bemotorcyclist stopped just in time to avoid aide him, when the now unbearded stranobservation. To make sure, he drew a ger suddenly swung about and strek Del Mar full in the face. It sent him reeling

The engine of the car had been run-Back on the road the bearded cyclist ning and before Del Mar could recover could see Del Mar move down the track. consciousness, the stranger had shot the car ahead, leaving Del Mar prone in the

The train, with Bailey in it, had not gained much speed, yet it was a perilous at the wheel when suddenly the cold nose undertaking to leap. Still, it was more "Not a word-hands up-or I'll let the stirred. It was now a case of murder or so now to remain. The baggage man a getaway.

Bailey jumped.

Scratched and bruised and shaken, he scrambled to his feet in the briars along the track. He staggered up the road, pulled himself together, then hurried back s fast as his barked shins would let him

He came to the spot which he recog nized as that where he had thrown off. the trunk. He saw the tramped and broken bushes and made for the road. He had not gone far when he saw, far down, Del Mar suddenly attacked and thrown down, apparently by his own chauffeur. Bailey ran forward, bt it was too late. The car had gone. As he came up to Del Mar lying outstretched in the road, Del Mar was just recovering consciousness.

"What was the matter?" he asked. Was he a traitor?"

He caught sight of the real cauffeur on the ground, stripped.

Del Mar was furious. "No," he swore, 'it was that confounded gray friar again, I think. And he has the trunk, too!"

Speeding up the road, the former masquerader and motorcyclist stopped at Eagerly he leaped out of Del Mar's ar and dragged the tunk over ion't like fellow," I remarked shaking my head dublously.

"Oh, you're-jealous, Walter," laughed Elaine, taking the envelope away from me and plling it again with the others. Thus it was that in the morning's mail, Del Mar, along with the rest of us, received a neatly engraved little invitation:

"Miss Elaine Dodge requests the pleasure of your presence at the masquerade ball to be given at her residence on Friday evening, June 1."

"Good!" he exclaimed, reaching for the telephone. "T'll go." ...

In a restaurant in the white light district two of those who had been engaged in the preliminary plot to steal Kennedy's wireless torpedo model, the young woman stenographer who had letrayed her trust and the man to whom she had passed the model out of the window in Washington, were seated at a table.

刘伯

So secret had been the relations of all those in the plot that one group did not more slowly through the palms. know the other and the atrangest methods of communication had been adopted. The man removed a cover from a dish, Underneath, perhaps without even the waiter's knowledge, was a note.

"Here are the orders at last." he whispered to the girl, unfolding and reading the note. "Look. "The model of the torpedo is somewhere in her house. Go toout after the Mexican bolero. night to the ball as a masquerader and search for it.

"Oh, splendid!" exclaimed the girl, "I'm asked cagerly. crany for a little society after this grind. Pay the check and let's get out and Mar, as she nodded and they left the conchoose our costumes."

servatory, not apparently together. The man paid the check and they left hurriedly. Half an hour later they were at a costumer's shop choosing their disboth careful to get the fullest lighted. With a quick glance about, he masks that would not excite suspicion. It was the night of the masquerade. entered cautiously, closed the door, and approached a closet which he opened. During the afternoon Elaine had been There was a safe built into the wall. thinking more than ever of Kennedy. It all seemed unreal to her. More than once she stopped to look at his photo- ped the package Del Mar had handed him and took out a curious little instrument. graph. Several times also checked herself Inside was a dry battery and a most on the point of tears.

peculiar instrument, something like a "No," she said to herself with a sort of grim determination. "No-he is alive, little fiat telephone transmitter, yet He will come back to me-he will."

And yet she had a feeling of terrific fitted over the head after the manner of those of a wireless detector. lonelin eas which even her most powerful efforts could not throw off. She was determined to go through with the ball, the flat instrument against the safe. now that she had started it, but she was close to the combination which he began really glad when it came time to dress, to turn slowly. It was a burglar's microfor even that took her mind from her phone, used for picking combination locks. brooding

As Marie finished helping her put on a slight sound was made when the proper very effective and conspicuous costume, number came opposite the working point. Aunt Josephine entered her dressing sensitive car, to an ear trained it was 10033

"Are you ready, my dear?" she asked, comparatively easy to recognize the fall djusting the mask which she carried so of the tumblers over this microphone. that no one would recognize her as As he worked, the door behind him Martha Washington.

"In just a minute, Auntie," answered closing it and moving noiselessly over trying hard to put out of her back of the shelter of a big mahogany mind how Craig would have liked her highboy, around which he could watch. dress.

newhat earlier, in my apartment, I the man went through its contents. had been arraying myself as Boum-Boum and modestly admiring the imitation I made of a circus clown as I did a couple The bolaro started to close the safe it out. of comedy steps before the mirror. when he heard a noise in the room and

But I was not really so light-hearted. I looked curiously back of him. Del Mar could not help thinking of what this night might have been if Kennedy had been tered. alive. Indeed, I was glad to take up my sary stepping out of the closet and meetwhite mask, throw a long coat over my costume and hurry off in my ing them, "but I can't find the-" waiting car in order to forget everything that reminded me of him in the apart-friar's gun yawning at them. Already a continuous stream of guests politely ha lined them up. Still holding. If Elaine had only known. It was the of booths on one alde

He had moved closer and almost touched her hand. The pointed hood of the gray friar in the palms showed that her hurry downstairs, accompaniet by were being packed. On one of the many continued down the street until she came him instantly. at last he saw what he sought. the Mexican bolero. I stepped forward trips, Bertholdi came alone into the attic, to a store with telephone booths. The "No-to. Please-axcuse me," she murmured rising and hurrying back to me without a word. the ball rom. "A nut" I remarked under my breath, nearly packed. She laid her armful of He had his car to the wall.

A subtle smile spread over the gray pushing back my mask. friar's masked face. I started to eat the ice myself, when, Of course, I had known Elaine. Whether a moment later, Elaine passed through she knew me at once I don't know or whether it was an accident, but she ap- the hall with a Spanish cavaller. proached me as I paused in the dance a laughed. moment with my domino girl. you. Thank you very much, aire," she

"From the aublime-to the ridiculous," she cried excitedly. My partner gave her a sharp glance.

As he stooped over, the man unwrap opened softly and the gray friar entered.

At last the safe was opened. Rapidly

"Hands up-all of you!"

with me.

"It was only one dance, you know. Please 'You will excuse me?" she said, and, as let me talk to Boum-Boum." The cavaller bowed reluctantly and ready" Elaine replied, hurrying out of I bowed, almost ran off to the conservatory, leaving Elaine to dance off left us.

"What are you doing here alone ?" she the room, "Tell him to wait." Del Mar, quite surprised at the sudden Before I could reply, I heard someone her. flight of Elaine from his side, followed oming downstairs back of me, but not in As he did so he passed a Mexican attime to turn.

tired in brilliant native costume. At a "Elaine's dressing table." a voice whissign from Del Mar he paused and repered in my ear.

"Oh, Walter, here you are," she bowed with mock civility to the cavalier.

"Tve been looking all over for white letters, "E. Dodge."

nounced.

I turned suddenly. It was the gray ceived a small package which Del Mar friar. Before I could even reach out to slipped to him, then passed on as though nothing had happened. The keen eyes grasp his robe, he was gone.

"Another nut!" I exclaimed involunof the gray friar, however, had caught the little action and he quietly alipped tarily. "Why, what did he say?" asked Elaine

Just then the domino girl hurried into "My dressing table?" she repeated. the conservatory. "What's donng?" she room showed every evidence of having turned to carry it off. "Keep cicse to me," whispered Del

Upstairs, away from the mayety of the which were some words printed with ball room, the bolero made his way pencil roughly. until he came to Elaine's room, dimly

"Look," she cried, as I read with her: over in her hands. no one see this but Jameson."

"What does it mean?" I asked. closet. As she opened the door, imagine floor near the trunk marked "E. Dodge."

our surprise at seeing Del Mar lying on She thrust it hastily into the tray, pullthe floor, bound and gagged before the ing a garment over it. open safe. "Get my scissors on the dresser," cried Elaine.

attached by wires to ear pieces that I did so, hastily cutting the cords that bound Del Mar.

"What does it all mean?" asked Elaine as he rose and stretched himself. He adjusted the headplece and held eign agent, searching the safe. But he overcame me and escaped." "Oh-then that is what the-" As the combination turned, a about to hand the note to Del Mar when tray almost identical. an idea seemed to come to her. Instead, Imperceptibly ordinarily to even the most

....

'Miss Bertholdi.'

Most Aunt Josephine were.

On the street the bolerc and the domino tray with the torpedo concealed in the girl were hurrying away as fast as they other, unmarked trunk, where it be-Meanwhile the gray friar had overcome A moment later the expressman entered,

Del Mar, had bound and gagged him, with Bertholdi and thrust him into the closet. Then he wrote the note and laid it, with a rose Elaine. from a vase, on Elaine's dressing table before he, too, followed.

More than ever I was at a loss to make picking up her dress.

trunk."

"Miss Dodge?" she inquired, as Jennings held open the portieres and she friend who had rosed as Balley and as They turned in time to see the gray entered the library where Elaine- and the Mexican. He entered the restaurant

In the attic, Bertholid was still at before the La Coste and, in a long duster asked, taking off her own mask. "How work, keeping her eyes open to execute and cap, Del Mar jumped in, and was the mission on which Del Mar had sent off. Rusty, forgotten in the excitement by Jennings, had roamed at will through the street from the hotel, the chug-chug of a waved his arms. It was the signal and > his cache of treasures. As Bertholdi started to move behind followed. the trunk, Rusty could stand it no longer. He darted ahead of her into his hiding sped.

"Something about your dressing table." was the torpedo model which he had dug up from the palm pot in the conserva-We ran quickly up the steps. Elaine's tory. He seized it in his mouth and prize in triumph and turning it over and "Do honest assistants search safes? Let! At that moment she heard Elaine on the stairs. What should she do? She must hide it. She loked about. There "My safe!" she cried, moving to a was the tray, packed and lying on the "Nearly through ?" panted Elaine.

"Yes, Miss Dodge."

"Then please tell the expressman to come up."

Bertholdi hesitated, chagrined. Yet, there was nothing to do but obey. She Still clutching his throat, as if it hurt, looked at the trunk by the tray to fix Del Mar choked, "I found a man, a for- it in her mind, then went downstairs.

As she left the room, Elaine lifted the tray into the trunk and tried to close the lid. But the tray was too high. She Elaine checked herself. She had been looked puzzled. On the floor was another

"The wrong trunk," she amiled to hershe crumpled it up and thrust it into her seif, lifting the tray out and putting the other one in, while she placed the first longed. Then she closed the first trunk.

"You may take that one." indicated

"Miss Dodge, here's something else to go in," said Bertholdi in desperation,

"Never mind. Put it in the other

It was the day after masquerade ball | Bertholdi was baffled, but she managed that a taxicab drove up to the Dodge to control herself. She must get word to bouse and a very trim but not over- Del Mar about that trunk marked "E. "I've opened it," whispered the emis- drassed young lady was announced as Dodge."

Late that afternoon, before a cheap restaurant, might have been seen our old and made his way to the first of a row heard him eatch himself. He turned and regardless of the enamel. leaped to his feet. Bulley closed with him to break the lock with a pocket pedo model.

Where was it?

The stranger soqwied.

(To Be Continued.)

Gables

Lincoln neb

DR. BENG FBAILER

June 29

July 2

SANATORIUM

Over and over they rolled. Bailey had jimmy. the Mexican bolero. I stepped forward trips, Bertholdi came alone into the attic, to a store with telephone boots. The other and the already drawn his revolver before he boots and shock the clothes until frocks and gowns left his hiding place. A shot, however, and lingerie lay strewn all about.

two trunks, very much alike, open and next booth, but did not call a number. would have been fatal to his part in the plans and was only a last resort, for it that even remotely resembled the tor-He could hear her call Del Mar, and although he did not hear Del Mar's anthe trays of both trunks already packed. swers, she repeated enough for him to Finally Bailey rolled his man over and getting his right arm free, dealt the bag-and the stranger, instead of following gage man a fierce blow with the butt of tho gun. The train was now pulling slowly up the grade. More time had been spent in overcoming the baggage man than he expected and Balley had to work quickly. keen excitement. Quickly he gave in-He dragged the trunk marked "E. structions and prepared to leave his Dodge" from the pile to the door and glanced out.

> Just around the curve in the railroad, Del Mar was waiting, straining his eyes down the track.

There was the train, puffing up the As it approached he rose and he waited anxiously. Had his plans been

The train passed. From the baggage car came a trunk catapaulted out by a At every turn the motorcycle and landed with its own and the train's momentum.

Over it rolled into the bushes, then stopped-unbroken, for Elaine had had it designed to resist even the most vio-On the level of the Grand Central, lent baggage smasher.

where the trains left for the Connecticut Del Mar ran to it. As the tail light over to the table. There she picked up new girl. Quick as a flash, she saw what shore, where Elaine's summer home was of the train disappeared he turned around located. Bailey was now edging his way in the direction from which he had come,

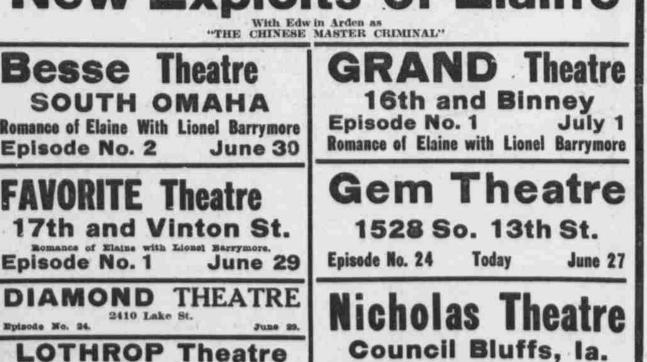

ALAMO THEATRE Episode No. 13

For Bookings: Write Pathe Exchange Inc. 1312 Farnam St. Omaha Neb.

This institution is the only one in the central west with separate buildings situated in their own ample grounds, yet entirely dis-tinct, and rendering it possible to classify cases. The one building being fitted for and devoted to the treatment of non-contagious and non-mental diseases, no others being admitted; the other Rest Cottage being designed for and deed to the exclusive treatment of select mental cases requiring for a time watchful care and special nursing.

Episode No. 19

motorcycle sounded. A bearded man, his face further hidden by a pair of goggles, carried out? ran out with his machine, climbed on and On out over the country Del Mar's car strong arm. It hurtled through the air her further, took the other direction bur-

Del Mar himself received the news with

A short time later his car pulled up dropped back a bit, observed the turn, then crept up and took it, too. So they went for some time. . . .

Episode No. 24.

3212 N. 24th Street

Scarcely had his car swung up the avenue when, from an alleyway down the grade.

Bertholdi began packing her burden in catch the drift. Finally, she came out, riedly.

rooms

house and seemed quite interested. For this was the trung behind which he had place. Among the dog buscuit and bones been the scene of a struggle, as she went There, in his path, was his enemy, the a rose and under it a piece of paper on it was Rusty had, and grabbed at it.

"Get out!" she ordered, looking at he