Cardigan Countess Dead

Passing of English Woman, Who, During Remarkable Career, Offended Queen Victoria.

LIFE FULL OF ROMANCE

(Correspondence of The Associated Press.) LONDON, June 30.—The countess of Cardigan, whose death, at the age of 91 years, had a remarkable career. She saw as a child much of the court life of King William IV, heard Tom Moore sing his own songs and knew the Marquis of Hertford, the original of Thackeray's including the earl of Cardigan, who led the charge of the light brigade at Balaklava and, after his death, a Portuguese nobleman, but she also received proposals from the legitimate heir to the Spanish throne, whom she narrowly missed marrying and from Diersey, a warm suitor, Lord Sherborne, the duke of Leeds, Prince Saityko and the duke of St. Albans.

Huse Company Gets Workman Contracts

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., June 30.—(Special Telegram.)—The contract for publishing the Nebraska Workman, the official organ of the Ancient Order of United Workmen of Nebraska, for the next four years was let today to the Huse Publishing company of Norfolk, who have printed this paper for the last sixteen years. The contract today was awarded on competitive bids, the Huse bid being selected out of a dozen from all parts of the state, because it was the lowest price, service considered.

The contract for furnishing printing and stationery supplies was let to the Huse Publishing company, its bid being the lowest among a large number.

Among the officers present were: Grand Master Workman Frank A. Anderson, Grand Recorder F. C. Whittlessey, Frank L. Evans, grand recorder-elect, and Ross L. Hamond, John H. Bennett, Nicholas Rees and Joseph Oberfeiler, members of the finance committee.

The contract for furnishing bonds was let to the Illinois Surety company. The new officers took their seats tonight.

LIFE FULL OF ROMANCE

(Correspondence of The Associated Press.) LONDON, June 30.—The countess of Cardigan, whose death, at the age of 91 years, had a remarkable career. She saw as a child much of the court life of King William IV, heard Tom Moore sing his own songs and knew the Marquis of Hertford, the original of Thackeray's including the earl of Cardigan, who led the charge of the light brigade at Balaklava and, after his death, a Portuguese nobleman, but she also received proposals from the legitimate heir to the Spanish throne, whom she narrowly missed marrying and from Diersey, a warm suitor, Lord Sherborne, the duke of Leeds, Prince Saityko and the duke of St. Albans.

The countess's father was Spencer de Horsey, M. P., and her mother the daughter of the earl of Stradbrooke. From childhood, Adeline de Horsey moved in the highest society in England. The duke of Wellington was one of her father's intimates.

The young woman's views were decidedly advanced for her time, and because she was not allowed a lach-key, she left home and got a house of her own in London. It was at this time she met the earl of Cardigan. The earl possessed brute courage and nothing else, and failed of promotion to a generalship on this account.

He had made an unhappy marriage with the divorced wife of a brother-officer, from which he was released by her death. Her intimacy with Cardigan in his wife's lifetime offended Queen Victoria. The result was she was practically ostracised by her own class because of the royal snub.

When after being widowed she married the count of Lancaster of Portugal, she gave fresh offense to the queen by taking the title of countess of Cardigan and Lancaster, for the queen was in the habit of calling herself the countess of Lancaster when traveling incognito.

Her gifts of mind and her beauty made the countess the leader of aristocratic Bohemia. She entertained large parties in the fine old Tudor mansion left her by her first husband.

Critics charge that the countess wrote her recollections to revenge herself on those who refused to receive her.

Sweden Proposes to Stop Smuggling Into the War Zone

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.) STOCKHOLM, June 29.—There has been much discussion about the smuggling of contraband from Sweden to Germany though it is well known that the customs officials have been alert to prevent it. The suspicions were justified apparently in the case of the steamer Solve which left Stockholm in January, loaded with plains, copper, rubber tires and a miscellaneous cargo of other articles. It was bound for Norrkoping, where additional cargo was to be put aboard. Then it was intended to have it go to Malmo and the coast where it would be outside Swedish waters, have the ship seized by Germans. But the authorities took the ship in Norrkoping harbor.

In February there was another attempt. Three big steamers loaded with maize came into Landskrona harbor, the bills of lading signed to order. A German presented himself as the owner and ordered the ships on the same day to Norrkoping around Falsterbo, evidently with the intention of being taken by the Germans. But the government declared that the ships must unload in Landskrona.

In the first week of April there was another striking case when the steamer England, belonging to the recent Swedish minister of marine, was captured off Falsterbo and brought to Stettin, where much of the cargo was unloaded as belonging to a German. It was another cargo of maize and came from America, being under the authorization of the Swedish government for use in Sweden. During the journey one of the interested firms sold its part of the cargo to a Stockholm firm, which in turn sold it to the German government.

As a result of such attempts the Swedish authorities now demand that every vessel bound for the coast shall call at Malmo for inspection. It may be that some tons of copper may have been smuggled across the frontier, but there has not been any systematic trade in contraband.
