"RAFFLES" GLENN IS STILL MYSTERY

Identity of Gentleman Burglar Who Entered House of Charles Sherman Not Known.

LETTER FROM WOMAN IS CLUE

Who is J. C. Glenn? The Fontenelle register gives his home as Chicago, but Glenn's soft, musical dialect marks him as a southerner.

As exclusively reported in The Bee yesterday, Glenn is the "gentleman burglar" who was caught in the home of Charles R. Sherman, 132 North Thirty-eighth street, president of the Sherman-McConnell chain of drug stores.

Well tailored, manneured, hair trimmed neatly, slotted linen and wearing exactly a gentleman's proper jewelry, the man who is now occupying the honor cell in headquarters station is the object of much interest.

At the Fontenelle the room of "Raffles" Glenn, as he has already been dubbed by the police, has been divested of all belongings and sent to headquarters.

Except for several watches, which may or may not belong to him, nothing of suspicious nature could be found. Only that prominent citizens practically caught him in the act of committing robbery, one would never take him for anything but a prosperous business man.

His personal possessions at the hotel consisted of an expensive bag, filled with traveler's articles, all engraved with his initials, and an umbrella-cane, also engraved.

Acting Chief of Detectives Devereaux attempted to draw him into confession of half a dozen burglaries in the neighborhood where he was caught, but Glenn remained steadfast, and insisted that "it was all a mistake."

Letter from Woman. A letter, worded somewhat ambiguously and postmarked at Minneapolis, is the only clue the police have.

The absence of three women clerks, the entire female staff of the city comptroller's office, constitutes an unprecedented condition in this department.

Death an Accident—The coroner's jury has determined that when A. S. Smith fell from the elevator shaft at the Parlin, Orendorf building and was killed, death was due to accident.

Women Folks Are Away—The absence of three women clerks, the entire female staff of the city comptroller's office, constitutes an unprecedented condition in this department.

OMAHA MEN GO TO CHEYENNE

Will Leave Wednesday Evening on Special Train to See Wyoming's Famous Frontier Days.

ARE ON BUSINESS BENT, TOO

The committee on arrangements for the excursion from Omaha to Cheyenne for the Frontier Day celebration, met at noon at the Commercial club to go over some further details of the tour.

The live stock commission men, and Union Stock Yards men are especially interested in the trip, as they draw a large per cent of their live stock shipments from that section of the country.

The wholesalers of Omaha are interested because they want to see the Frontier Day show and because they have many old-time customers in that section.

The special train is to leave Omaha next Wednesday evening. On the return from Cheyenne the train is to make numerous stops in the valley of the North Platte river, where the Omaha men are to visit to see somewhat remarkable irrigation belt, and look after the interests of Omaha as the market town of that section.

Hastings College.

Miss Perry from out of the city is visiting among friends and doing work in the college library.

Miss Forsyth is assisting in the office during the summer months while Mr. Rosenblat is out in the "field."

The dormitories are being put in shape now for the conference to be held within a couple of weeks. Repairs are also being made in the other buildings so that the entire plant will be in good shape by the last of the month.

Clyde B. Althoffson of the class of 1912, who is secretary of the Oregon State Railway commission took his master's degree from the University of Oregon the last commencement. His chief work being done in the department of economics.

The conference enrollment already promises a great increase over last year. The chances are that the enrollment will reach the 20 mark. This will be a strong conference, worth very much to every one who attends. The leaders are experts in their line.

Superintendent Martin of the Broken Bow school and Superintendent Overturf of the Beaver City school and Superintendent Overturf of Sheldon, Ia., went through the college buildings examining equipment, etc., the last week. They expressed themselves as being surprised at the completeness of the plant. It is a common thing to find the school people of the States surprised at the plant which Hastings college has built up.

Prof. Kent, who last year spent the summer in Nova Scotia in the interest of the museum, is now spending considerable time on the Great Lakes. He writes that he will have the best exhibit for the museum this fall of any that has thus far been installed. He is at present doing work in an art studio and taxidermist shop in Cleveland. He has also been taking weather records at Put-In-Bay Island.

Nebraska Military Academy. Mrs. Masters of St. Joseph enrolled her three boys at the academy last week. The campus is in full bloom and presents a fine appearance. Farming is all the go. The second crop of corn is up. The school is in full session and will be ready for the September opening. Apple picking and potato digging will be the order of the week in this month.

The outlook for a large and successful school is better than ever before. Captain Cyril of Kansas came to the academy to see the school. Hon. H. C. Richmond of Omaha called on Colonel Hayward Friday. Capt. John Marley, Clifford Post and David Alexander are taking practical lessons in agriculture at the academy this summer. Several other boys will come in this month.

Colonel Hayward has secured the services of Captain Harry N. Russell of Chicago as his instructor for the coming year. Captain Russell brings a wide and successful experience as a military school man, having been headmaster at the Kearney Military academy for fifteen years; also at DeCoven Hall, Takonah, Wash., and at the University school, Chicago. He is well known and favorably known in this territory. He will arrive about August and will assist Colonel Hayward in bringing in a big bunch of boys for the fall opening.

Some Changes Made in Omaha Faculty

Several important changes are to take place on the University of Omaha faculty for the coming season. Miss Edna Mantor, a fellow and assistant professor of zoology of the University of Nebraska, has been secured to take charge of the biology department, taking the place of Prof. E. Sage.

Miss Mantor is in California collecting specimens for her department.

Other changes are to take place in the ethics and English departments, but as yet no new heads have been selected.

Prof. F. P. Murray, who was in charge of ethics, tendered his resignation to take effect September 1, at which time he will move to another campus to fill the Bible chair at the university in that town. A new professor for the English department will be secured next week.

A number of new branches are to be added to the curriculum for the coming season. The science department is to be especially advanced. Courses in geology and advanced vertebrate anatomy have already been arranged for. Other sciences to be added will enable the school to provide all the pre-medical courses required for entrance to the best medical schools of the country.

The school will remain at its present location for at least another year, declared Dr. D. E. Jenkins, president of the university. It is still undecided whether to build on the present school site or move to a more desirable place.

Bryant and Carney Buy the Loyal Hotel

The Loyal hotel, Sixteenth street from Capitol avenue to Davenport street, was sold yesterday to R. E. Bryant and O. E. Carney, who took possession of the big, fireproof hostelry at noon.

The two new owners expect to add two stories to the structure as soon as possible, thus increasing very materially the capacity of the hotel, which, at present, has 125 rooms, modern in every respect.

Mr. Bryant comes here from Shenandoah, Ia., where he was proprietor of the Delmonico hotel for the last three and a half years. Prior to that he had the Crawford hotel at Fort Dodge, Ia., for three years and before that the Oaks hotel at Clear Lake for two seasons. In all he has been successful.

He came west from Maine seventeen years ago and spent several years traveling for Swift & Co. before going into the hotel business. It is said there is no man better acquainted throughout Iowa and neighboring states than Mr. Bryant.

Knows Western Men. O. E. Carney has an equally extensive acquaintance throughout Nebraska and for a number of years has been the general chief clerk of the Merchants hotel, before that being prominently connected with the Millard and the Big Brand. He gained much knowledge of the catering end of the business by three years in the Union Pacific's dining car service.

A number of special improvements in service and equipment will be made by the new proprietors and it is expected their wide acquaintance and high reputations will fill the modern hostelry to its capacity.

Mrs. Coon and her sons, Loyal and Walter, former proprietors, will leave for a trip to California, and the exposition.
